

Refused Fortune For Royal Secrets

Few people noticed one day recently that the lady riding in a small black car through London's East End, past the wheel stalls and fruit barrows, was the Queen.

When the car stopped at the visitor's entrance of the London Hospital, the news spread that Her Majesty had arrived. Yet she paid no formal visit to the public wards. Instead, she sat chatting for 40 minutes to a private patient—a railwayman's daughter from Inverness.

"I've brought you some flowers" and "Get well soon!" said the Queen, just like any other hospital visitor.

Who was the woman in the private room? She is Miss Margaret Macdonald—"Bobo" to the royal family—who spends her life serving the Queen and dodging publicity. For 30 years she has always been at the Queen's side, from Her Majesty's babyhood, through marriage to the throne.

Auburn-haired Miss Macdonald is the Queen's personal maid. At 8.15 every morning she wakes the Queen with a cup of tea, and she is the last to attend the Queen in the evenings. An American magazine once offered her $150,000 just for spending a few sessions with expert interviewers to tell all she knows.

Bobo hears the Queen's comments on many people and many things. She has indeed been rightly described as one of the Queen's closest confidantes. But she is never to be drawn into any conversation concerning her mistress.

In the Steward's Hall at Buckingham Palace she has a top-table place of honor. And woe betide anyone who calls her anything other than "Miss Macdonald."

She has her own cabin on the royal yacht Britannia, her own rooms at Balmoral, Windsor and Sandringham, her own elegantly furnished suite at Buckingham Palace.

More than five years ago, when George VI went to London airport and bade farewell to his daughter for what was to be the last time, he said to Miss Macdonald: "Look after the Princess for me, Bobo."

His words charged the humble girl from Inverness with a lifelong sense of mission. The one comment on the Queen ever heard from Bobo is simply: "I must go. My little lady wants me."

On many a royal tour, the first coach of the royal railway train or the royal plane is cosily shared just by the Queen, the Duke of Edinburgh—and Bobo.

At Lisbon airport she was mistaken for the Queen by the cheering crowd. In Washington where (much to her disgust) photographers managed to take her picture, she was called the Queen's double.

Neatly enough, Bobo has a sister, Robina, who is personal maid to Princess Margaret. The royal sisters are thus tended by two sisters.

There was a family crisis when Robina—christened Ruby—fell in love with a Palace footman. Falling in love couldn't be helped, but inevitably their marriage entailed . . . publicity!

Superintendent Tom Clarke, chief of the Buckingham Palace police, was best man. Among the wedding gifts were lovely pieces of jewellery and a gift inscribed: "To my dear, faithful Ruby—from Margaret."

Half the Palace staff formed a huge crowd to cheer the happy pair, now Mr. and Mrs. Norman Gordon. Now, when her beautifully-dressed Queen goes to the theatre, Bobo spends the evening with the Gordons at the little "grace and favor" residence the Queen Mother found for them in Marlborough Mews.

No two sisters outside the royal family can survey a happier or more sparkling cavalcade as they look back at old times.

There was the occasion when the Queen was presented with a $75,000 casket of diamonds and Bobo had to look after them. It was the only time she nearly had the jitters.

Then, on the Queen's wedding morning, there was panic at the last minute because the bridal bouquet was lost—until a footman remembered he had put it in a cupboard to keep cool.

Naturally, Bobo had her special seat for the wedding. And on Coronation Day the police cleared a special route for her across crowded London and gave her an escort all to herself to Westminster Abbey.

Bobo remembers, too, the day when, trembling with nerves, she first went to Balmoral Castle to see the housekeeper and apply for a job as under-housemaid.

Instead, within a very few weeks, she was sent to London to become the little Princess Elizabeth's under-nurse. "Bobo," the nickname that has stuck to her through the years, was lapsed by the Princess in her nursery cot.

At Windsor, she has always tended a special rosemary shrub which yielded sprigs for the Queen's christening. On the Queen's honeymoon, as she stepped into the royal train, sprigs of rosemary were laid ready on the tea-table.

"God bless you both," Bobo had written. "Rosemary for remembrance." The token was an apt one from the discreet, dimpled Scotswoman who serves the Queen so well, for rosemary is the ancient emblem of true faithfulness.

GRIZZLIES TOTEMS
TEPEES AND AN IGLOO—A 16-foot styrofoam plastic igloo, two Indian tepees, eight small totem poles and two carved grizzly bears will decorate the Canadian Contingent headquarters encampment at the Boy Scouts' Jubilee in Britain next August.

Canada's Department of Northern Affairs is lending the Igloo, which will be manned part time by Canadian Eskimo Scouts. Authentic furnishings for the igloo are now being gathered in Canada's northland. The igloo is now on display in the National Museum in Ottawa prior to being dismantled and packed for shipment to the Jamboree early in May.

The carved grizzly bears are being loaned by the British Columbia Provincial Museum. Scouts and leaders of the London, Ontario, District, are making the tepees and carving the eight totem poles. W. A. Speed of Halifax, N.S., Executive Commissioner for the Nova Scotia Scout Council, is in charge of programs and displays for the Canadian Contingent to the Jamboree.

"Good morning, ma'am!"

WATCH THE FISHIE!—When in Rome, do as the Romans do. So this enterprising photographer substitutes "watch the fishie" for the old familiar "watch the birdie," as he aims his camera at a Humboldt penguin at the Aquarium in Coney Island. Twenty of the penguins were flown from their native Chile to join other exhibits at the Aquarium.

GRASSROOTS WEDDING PARTY—A hitch in the wedding schedule of Eileen Gummesson, left, happened when her maid-of-honour lost the wedding ring on the lawn of the Gummesson home. A borrowed ring saved the day. The bridegroom found the lost ring after the ceremony.

Barbecues will undoubtedly smoke up the landscape from now till fall, and steak is likely to continue as the most popular barbecue dish. Probably you know that slashing the fat at the edges will prevent curling, and that when you turn your steak, you should put your fork into the fat, for a fork in the lean will make holes from which good juices will escape.

Here are some broiling times, recommended by the U.S. Department of Agriculture:

For a 1-inch steak: Rare, about 10 minutes; medium, about 15; well done, 20 to 25.

For a 1½-inch steak: Rare, about 15 minutes; medium, about 20 minutes; well done, 25 to 30 minutes.

For a 2-inch steak: Rare, about 25 minutes; medium, about 35 minutes; well done, 45 to 50 minutes.

Ribs may be precooked before barbecuing or barbecued while raw. Precooked ribs require only about 15 minutes for barbecuing, but in this time get a real barbecue taste. For preparing them this way, simmer in a small amount of water in a heavy covered kettle for about 1 hour. Refrigerate until ready to grill. Cut into serving portions and grill over hot coals, brushing with the following barbecue sauce as you turn frequently.

BARBECUE SAUCE FOR RIBS
1 cup chopped green onion
2 tablespoons butter
2 teaspoons paprika
½ teaspoon pepper
Dash of cayenne
2 tablespoons brown sugar
1 tablespoon dry mustard
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
½ teaspoon Tabasco sauce
½ cup catsup
2 tablespoons vinegar
Cook onion in butter until tender, about 5 minutes. Add all other ingredients. Simmer about 10 minutes, stirring frequently.

This is a thick sauce and is enough for 2 or 3 sides of spare-ribs. It keeps well in a covered jar in refrigerator.

If ribs are barbecued without precooking, they require about 1 hour.

If you like to barbecue lamb chops, try this herb sauce. This amount is for about 2 pounds of lamb. Pour the sauce over the lamb and let stand in refrigerator 2-4 hours. Broil or barbecue the lamb, brushing with the herb sauce 2 or 3 times during cooking.

HERB BARBECUE SAUCE
1 small onion
3 cloves garlic
2 sprigs rosemary (or 1 teaspoon dried rosemary)
12 fresh mint leaves (or 1 teaspoon dried mint leaves)
½ cup vinegar
½ cup water
Chop onion and garlic and add rosemary and mint leaves which have been crushed. Add vinegar and water and let mixture stand 4-6 hours.

If you like to experiment with oven barbecue, try this pork tenderloin with oriental sauce for a new eating experience.

CHINESE BARBECUED PORK
1½ pounds pork tenderloin
2 tablespoons soy sauce
2 tablespoons sugar
Freshly ground pepper
Cut pork tenderloin into 8 pieces. Combine soy sauce, sugar and pepper. Pour this sauce over pork and stir to coat well with sauce. Keep in refrigerator 2-3 hours.
Spread pork tenderloin pieces on a shallow baking pan. Pour sauce over it. Bake in slow oven (325 degrees F.) about 1 hour. Turn or stir pork 2 or 3 times during roasting so pork bakes in sauce. Serve with following sauce:

ORIENTAL SAUCE
1 tablespoon dry mustard
1 tablespoon vinegar
½ cup catsup
1 tablespoon soy sauce
½ teaspoon curry powder
Combine all ingredients and heat.

BARBECUED SHISH KABOBS
2 pounds tender beef, cut into 1-inch pieces
½ cup lemon juice
½ cup olive oil
2 teaspoons salt
½ cup liquid smoke
4 tomatoes, quartered
3 medium onions, sliced in thick slices
2 green peppers, cut in eighths
Basting sauce (recipe follows)

Combine lemon juice, liquid smoke, oil and salt. Mix thoroughly and pour over meat. Let meat stand in sauce at room temperature for 30 minutes. Run meat on skewers, alternating with tomatoes, onions and green peppers. Broil over open fire, turning often to brown well on all sides; baste frequently with sauce and serve with additional sauce.

BASTING SAUCE
Juice and cut up peel of 2 lemons
½ cup salad oil
1 cup vinegar
2 bay leaves
½ cup liquid smoke
1 No. 2 can tomato juice
1 tablespoon brown sugar or molasses
2 cups water
Mix ingredients and bring to boil. Brush and baste cooking meats.

Dimly-lit Planet

When the remote planet of Neptune was recently at its nearest to our Earth—about 2,728 million miles distant—astronomers all over the world spent many nights studying its greenish disc, which has no visible markings, hoping to learn something new about this giant in space.

It was announced that, when ther it is inhabited or not, there is now no doubt that only dim twilight conditions can exist there. This is because the amount of sunlight reaching the surface of Neptune is about 900 times less than that which shines on the Earth.

Neptune was actually discovered before it was seen. Its existence was deduced by a French astronomer named Le Verrier as a result of mathematical investigation. He indicated the place where it might be expected to be seen and on the night of September 23rd, 1846, Professor J. G. Galle, chief assistant at the Berlin Observatory, became the first man on earth to see Neptune. He found the planet within less than one degree of the place the Frenchman had indicated.

Today astronomers declare that the finding of Neptune before it had been seen must always rank as the most brilliant of all planetary discoveries.

"Just laugh at your troubles," said a psychiatrist to his patient. "Look them in the face and laugh at them."

"I wouldn't dare," was the reply. "My wife and mother-in-law have no sense of humour!"

SALUTE TO THE QUEEN—These Royal Navy ships maneuver skillfully in greeting to Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip as the couple, aboard the royal yacht Britannia, cruise the North Sea. Front to rear are the aircraft carriers Ark Royal, Albion and Ocean.

SHORT COURSE—Seems only the young man's pants got any "higher education" in this quick look at the subject. The youngster, known as "Dickie" became curious at commencement exercises at St. Olof's College, marched up to see what it was all about, upper left; looked around, upper right; gave his pants a hitch, lower left; and, curiosity satisfied, sauntered off the platform.

Siamese Cats

On very hot days the beautiful jet-haired Siamese princess always went down to a little beach where she could bathe unobserved, afterwards sunning her slim body as she lay on the warm sands. But sometimes she was haunted by the fear that her priceless jewels might be lost or stolen while she was in the water.

One day the sight of her faithful and inseparable companion, a sleek short-haired cat with eyes of clear forget-me-not blue, gave her an idea. She carefully strung the jewels together and hung them securely on the cat's rather unusual-looking tail, where they remained until she had dressed and was ready to return to the palace.

So often did she do this from that day onwards that the cat developed an odd kink in its tail and that is why — says an ancient legend — all the early Siamese cats had these kinks, or knots.

Few people nowadays believe this picturesque but unlikely story, but everybody knows that Siamese cats were once regarded as sacred animals in their own land, and were only allowed to be kept in the royal palaces and temples.

As to the kink in the cat's tails, there is to-day a difference of opinion about whether it is a good or bad point at cat shows. In Siam itself the kink is considered to be a malformation and one that no good cat should possess.

Many breeders and judges outside of Siam, frown if they see any trace of the kink, although it is generally agreed that a slight one at the extreme tip of the tail doesn't matter very much if the cat's other features are of the highest standard.

These amazing little animals with jewel-blue eyes are cats in name and in appearance only. In disposition they are more like dogs. All cat-lovers agree that they have a wonderful personal loyalty and a dog-like fidelity which is quite touching.

Some experts believe that the Siamese cat is the nearest existing relative to the "divine" cat of ancient Egypt. In old Siam, certainly, it was widely thought that when a man or any of his family died, their souls passed into the cat.

That is why, after a rich man's death, a Siamese cat was frequently sent to the temple where it lived in luxury and splendour, lying on silken cushions and being fed with the choicest foods. Jewels, gold and priceless fabrics were "offered" to these pampered pets.

Whenever an old Siamese nobleman went on a long journey he usually took a Siamese cat with him in case he should die on the way. With him, too, went a specially appointed "cat woman" whose job was to feed and tend the cat and see that it slept warmly and comfortably at night.

There are still Mohammedans in Siam who seriously believe that when Mohammed comes to earth again he will be reincarnated in the body of a Siamese cat.

They are amazingly intelligent and sometimes almost human in their ways and emotions. One Siamese cat I know, when he has failed after many gentle taps with his paw to make his owner attend to him, leaps lightly up on to the mantelpiece and begins to sharpen his claws upon the treasured portrait of his owner's great-grandmother that hangs above it.

Cat breeders warn that the Siamese can be very destructive in the home. Their claws have been known to rip the most valued of soft furnishings, so it is advisable to train them from kittenhood.

An epidemic of whisker-biting broke out among Siamese cats in Britain about seven years ago and many potential show-winners were losing their looks.

It was found that the whisker-biting usually started with a newborn kitten. The kitten nibbled off the whiskers of all his brothers and sisters and then chewed off the mother's!

One result of this strange epidemic was that whiskerless Siamese cats were bumping against furniture and stumbling in the dark, because a cat relies upon whisker — sensitivity to gauge width for the passage of its body.

Although the whiskers grew again in six weeks, the constant chewing and pulling of the top lip widened the nose of many cats and, as Siamese cats should have pointer noses, the value of the whisker-bitten ones went down and prizes at shows were missed.

One Siamese cat expert said: "Whisker-biting is just like nail-biting in humans. Sometimes it is, because the whiskers tickle."

THE FARM FRONT

by John Russell

Free world farmers are increasingly alarmed that the United States, through the growing bulk of its agricultural surpluses, may be forced into a mammoth program of dumping of commodities.

This dumping (the export sale of grains, oils, or fibers at prices below the costs of production) they feel is already destructive to their interests. Their concern arises from the growing world comprehension that subsidized export sales can become, if pressed hard enough, "a struggle not between farmers, but between treasuries." In such a fight, they fear, they can only lost against the American dollar.

Such views, expressed in louder chorus through diplomatic channels in recent months, formed a central theme for discussion at the tenth anniversary meeting of the International Federation of Agricultural Producers. They appeared as the backbone of recommendations drawn up by 200 delegates from 42 farm organizations representing 35,000,000 farmers in 26 lands.

Weighing these lengthy recommendations and 10 full days of probing discussion — in simultaneous translation in English and French — farmer observers to the IFAP session see two possible outcomes. A world "umpire" may be set up for commodity trading under the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization as urged by IFAP delegates, to serve as a review board using public opinion to check the actions of nations ruled to be using unfair trading practices. Secondly, a new decision of just how dumping should be defined for farm crop sales may be added to the journals of agriculture. It would probe closer to the real costs of production.

Should world farm thinking move in an opposite direction, shifting toward the conclusion that fair export competition is not and will not become possible in food and fiber, farmer organizations will urge their governments to propose that dollar-subsidized exports be limited somewhat by world marketing agreements, observers predicted. Under these cartel-like understandings, if achieved, smaller nations that rely on their farm crop exports for vital national income could be assured of retaining an area in which they could see at a profitable price.

With most of the world's wheat surpluses now binned on the North American continent due to a combination of good crops, increasing technological improvement in farming, and government policies, IFAP members heard the most detailed criticism of Yankee export policies from the United States' neighbor to the north, Canada. Other traditional wheat exporters, Australia and Argentina, and exporters by policy, France and Turkey, have been less affected, because they had less to sell in recent months.

"During the present crop year," said Canadian delegates in the restrained words of diplomacy, "intensification of surplus disposal efforts by our competitors will, by all appearances, seriously reduce our exports and cut very substantially into commercial markets we believe, in the absence of very heavily subsidized competition, would go to Canada. This whittling away of our markets threatens to continue into the future, with increasing severity."

"Surpluses existing today outside Canada are sufficiently large if they continue to be disposed of by methods used during the past 12 months, to gravely damage the Western and Canadian farm economies," Canadian spokesmen added. Avoiding direct reference to the past years of government high parity price supports which most delegates have agreed encouraged the burgeoning American surpluses, the Canadians noted: "The roots of the international commodity problems lie, to a considerable degree, on the nature of the domestic agricultural policies of the world's nations."

Australian delegates pointed their comments toward their nation's need to export agricultural commodities to earn credits with which to buy machinery and industrial raw materials. These in turn are necessary, they said, if Australia is to assure a reasonable income to its many World War II and cold-war refugees — 400,000 in five years. State treasury competition, it was indicated, could wipe away this income.

Echoing these views were delegates representing the American Farm Bureau Federation, the largest American farmer organization. Walter L. Randolph, AFBF vice-president and farm bureau delegate from Alabama, outlined the nationwide organization's thinking in detail.

"In our view," he said, "government policies which encourage production in excess of and in advance of effective market demand not only depress farmer incomes but they create international problems which at best can be dealt with on a very unsatisfactory basis. We agree that it is not fair on a continuing basis to subsidize the production of surpluses of our export crops through policies which require government 'surplus disposal programs' to market the commodity."

Not necessarily is the domestic sale price of a commodity always a fair export price, Mr. Randolph argued. A fair price, he suggested, is a price not lower than "the price at which the production of the commodity was induced," either by the free market price or government programs.

IFAP delegates displayed keen interest in the "soil bank" concept as a device to reduce production without harsh farm-land effects after war prices or government support programs have pushed crop production above market needs.

Farewell In Tibet

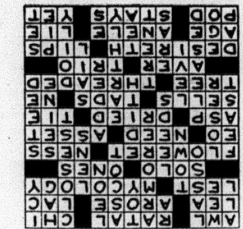

One of the most attractive features in Tibetan life is the habit of going to meet, and seeing off, one's friends. When anyone goes away, his friends often put up a tent on his road several miles out of the town and wait for him there with a meal to speed him on his way. The departing friend is not allowed to go till he has been loaded with white scarves and good wishes.

When he comes back the same ceremony is observed. It sometimes happens that he is welcomed at several places on his way home. In the morning, maybe he first catches sight of the Potala; but on his way into the town he is held up at tent after tent by his welcoming friends, and it is evening before he arrives in Lhasa, his modest caravan swollen to stately proportions by his friends and their servants.

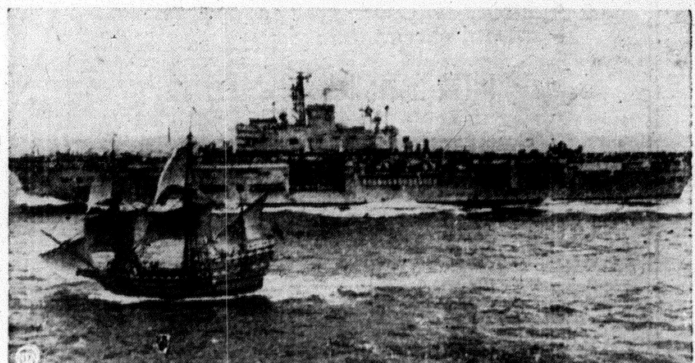

He comes home with the happy feeling that he has not been forgotten. — From "Seven Years in Tibet," by Heinrich Harrer, translated from the German by Richard Graves.

In Rochester, ordered by a judge to leave town right away after he was caught in an attempted burglary, George Williams, 22, was nabbed 14 hours later repeating the crime, explained that he was looking for money and a new pair of shoes for the trip.

Jethro, a Practical Counsellor
Exodus 18: 13-24

Memory Selection: Jethro rejoiced for all the goodness which the Lord had done. Exodus 18:9

One never knows what great events may hinge on a little act of kindness. Moses had fled from Egypt to Midian and was sitting by a well. He saw seven waters, who were drawing water for their father's flock, being driven away by rude shepherds. His sense of justice was outraged. He came to the aid of the young ladies. The result: Moses was later invited to the home where he stayed for forty years; he married one of the daughters; he received the very valuable advice recounted in our lesson; he received helpful guidance for Israel as they journeyed through the wilderness. Numbers 10:31.

D. L. Moody said, "It is better to set a hundred men to work than to do the work of a hundred men." This is especially true in the work of the kingdom of God. When people have a specific responsibility in promoting the work of a church they take a greater interest. It is a point in favor of the smaller church that a higher percentage usually have responsibility.

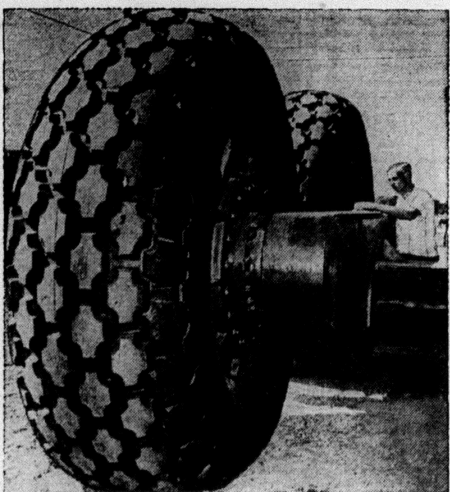

By organizing Israel so that there are rulers of thousands, of hundreds, of fifties and of tens, Moses was able to conserve his strength for the weighty matters. It was well that he was humble enough to accept and act upon the advice of his father-in-law. The men chosen were to be "able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness."

The apostles acted on the same principle in calling for "seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom" to look after the care of the widows and other matters.

Paul wrote to Timothy, "The things that thou hast heard of me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also." 2 Timothy 2:2. We must share the good news of salvation which others and urge them to pass it on. Only thus with the gospel be carried to all men. Each one teach one.

Moses may well have said concerning the counsel received Jethro, "This was the best advice I ever had."

"For twenty-five years my wife and I were ideally happy," said Bill to his companion. "Then what happened?" "We met."

NO BUMPER JACK?—Towering nine feet tall, the world's largest tires are tested in the New Mexico desert before shipment to Saudi Arabia. CELEBRATED BIRTHDAY ON DOMINION DAY

A very memorable occasion took place at Nichol's cottage near Glen Allen Park, Marmora, on July 1st, when the family of Mrs. Ed Wannamaker Sr., Eldorado, gathered to honour her on her 83rd birthday.

A bountiful picnic lunch was enjoyed by over 30 relatives from Niagara Falls, N.Y., Lindsay, Peterboro, Marmora, Stirling, Springbrook, Campbellford, Trenton, and Baltimore.

After lunch Mrs. Wannamaker opened her gifts and thanked everyone although taken entirely by surprise. In her remarks Mrs. Wannamaker said that she had always been proud that she had been born on Dominion Day.

All spent an enjoyable afternoon reminiscing and playing games. Ten great grandchildren were present.

North Hastings Review

TRINITY W. A.

The members of Trinity United Church Women's Association entertained the W.A. members of Mar-mora, White Lake and Queensboro United congregations in the church parlors on Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Perry Bronson, president of Madoc W.A., extended greetings to the visitors and opened the meeting by reading a poem. "It" followed by the theme song and prayer.

The usual business period was conducted and plans made for a motor trip to Wellington in July.

Mrs. W. McCoy was in charge of the worship period and used a poem for opening. "A Prayer for Every Day." Mrs. Moore read the Bible Story from the book of Job, and Mrs. McCoy presented the comments on the lesson.

The offering was dedicated by Mrs. Jackson, Sr.

An entertaining program put on by the visitors followed. Mrs. Jack Francis and Mrs. Doug Francis sang a duet, "Rugged Cross of Calvary," with guitar accompaniment by Mrs. D. Francis. A quintet from Queensboro W.A., Mrs. J. Gordon, Mrs. A. Holmes, Mrs. Bob Sager, Mrs. B. Holmes and Mrs. Lewis, sang "Make the World a Better Place to Live."

Mrs. R. C. Jackson introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Marsh, of Belleville, president of the Hastings and Prince Edward section of the Belleville Presbytery, who gave an interesting and informative address, "Christian Citizenship," and said that "a good motto was to try and make the world a better place for your living."

She gave some helpful suggestions on how W.A. members can work along together for the good of their church at home and at large, and passed along ideas of how to help financially.

Mrs. Bronson presented the speaker with a corsage and Mrs. Frank Daffoe extended the thanks of the ladies to Mrs. Marsh for her worthwhile address.

A vocal solo by Mrs. Heath, of Mar-mora W.A., was much enjoyed. Mrs. Davidson, vice-president of the Hastings and Prince Edward section, brought greetings and spoke briefly.

While the ladies were preparing refreshments, Mrs. Bronson put on a contest, "Women of the Bible," which was enjoyed as everyone was privileged to get acquainted. Mrs. B. Tanner and Mrs. A. Empey poured tea.

ST. PETER'S W.M.S.

Mrs. Russell Lewis was hostess for the June meeting of St. Peter's W.M.S. The president, Miss Van-Kleeck, conducted the business period. Mrs. Johnson reviewed the highlights of the W.M.S. Rally held in Stirling.

Mrs. Blakely was in charge of the program which opened with hymn 295, "The Church's One Foundation."

The Scripture Lesson, Mark 9:33-50, was read by Mrs. Alvey. A meditation on the First Commandment, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me," was given by Mrs. Bailey, followed by prayer by Mrs. Blakely.

The topic for the month, "The Church in Taiwan" was taken by Mrs. Blakely. Here the church is young, comparatively small in membership, inadequately staffed, and surrounded by almost overwhelming tasks of evangelism in a society that is nearly 99 per cent non-Christian. Yet this church is conscious of its own missionary obligation to the mass of the island's population, of the need of deepening and strengthening its own spiritual life. They are conscious of belonging to the world Christian community where each must help the other in fulfilling the great task to which Christ has called his people.

Mrs. Avey and Mrs. Lewis sang a beautiful duet, "How Great Thou Art."

Mrs. Blakely and Mrs. Bailey in dialogue form, enumerated the problems confronting the church in Taiwan, stressing the need for Christian men and women, strong in their faith, to train as church leaders. These Christian people are preparing for the day when they might be called on to be independent of the Mother church.

The president asked for special prayers during the month. Mrs. Alvey and Mrs. Mackintosh who were to leave on a trip to Scotland, were presented with a small gift.

Hymn 323 was sung, followed by the Lord's prayer in unison and a social time was enjoyed.

BETHESDA W.A.

The June meeting was held in the evening in the newly decorated basement of Bethesda Church with 15 members and 4 juniors present. The president opened the meeting with theme song and prayer. The roll call and sick calls were responded to. (Roll call—Name one of the twelve disciples of Jesus.) Hymn No. 50, "The Way of the Cross Leads Home," was sung.

Mrs. Jack Francis was in charge of the worship service, reading the topic, "Integrity," followed by prayer. Miss Sheila Francis gave the scripture reading taken from Job. 2nd Chapter, Verses 1-10. Hymn 111 was sung.

The president, Mrs. Leslie Blakely, read a chapter taken from the book, "The Holy Habits," entitled, "I Say Grace Before Meals."

The minutes of the May meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. Will French and approved. A thank you letter was read for gift received for a new baby. The business part of the meeting was paying the outstanding bills.

Mrs. Doug Francis was in charge of the programme. Mrs. Ward Holland gave a reading entitled, "Elderly Widow." Mrs. Doug Francis favored us with a solo accompanied by the guitar, "Where Will You Build," enjoyed by all. Mrs. Jack Francis was in charge of a contest, "Birds and Animals that went in Noah's Ark," Mrs. Lloyd Fleming winning the prize. Collection was taken and hymn 150, "I Will Sing the Wonderful Story," followed. The meeting closed by repeating the benediction.

A dainty lunch was served by the convenor and her assistants and a social half hour enjoyed by all.

TRINITY W.M.S.

The members of Trinity United Women's Missionary Society held their regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Joe Rollins, on Wednesday afternoon, with a good attendance.

In the absence of the president, Miss Annie Holmes was in charge and opened with all reading hymn 699 followed with prayer by Mrs. Holmes.

During the business period, Mrs. Fred Fleming, community friendship convenor, reported that 33 house calls and 64 hospital calls had been made. Miss Holmes, convenor of supplies, had a complete layette on exhibit, this to be forwarded at a later date.

She also read a letter from the port worker at Halifax, thanking the Madoc society for the gift of men's sweaters which had been sent. Plans for packing a bale were also made.

A sale of fancy work and home cooking was announced for a Saturday in July. A patchwork quilt was donated by Mrs. E. Moore.

Mrs. Bennett conducted the worship period, the theme "To Live and to Give." She gave a reading on "Joy and Friends."

Mrs. B. Tanner read the Bible story from 2nd Corinthians translated "Letters to Young Churches," with Mrs. Bennett giving the meditation.

The program, with Mrs. Bennett as leader, presented a skit "We Must Share," which was informative, telling how the givings of the missionary members were used and explaining what officers of the Dominion Board received salaries, and why.

She was assisted by Mrs. J. Stor-rings, Mrs. Naylor, Mrs. Moore and Mrs. W. McCoy.

Mrs. P. H. Naylor and Mrs. Tanner assisted the hostess in serving refreshments.

ELDORADO AND UNION W.M.S.

The Eldorado and Union Missionary Society met Thursday afternoon, June 13, at the home of Mrs. Dan Robinson.

Mrs. Arthur Robinson led in a beautiful worship service which opened with a thought on Christian Guidance and used for her theme, "Helping Others to Follow Christ Through Missions."

The roll call was taken with twelve members present.

The minutes were read and accepted. Mrs. Earl Blakely conducted the business meeting as the group made plans for the bake sale that will be held July 6th in Trotter's Hardware.

Mrs. Clifford Blakely led in a program of music with the theme, "Stewardship of Money and Stewardship of Prayer."

After the meeting, refreshments were served by the hostess.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT • ONTARIO
Hon. A. Kelso Roberts, Attorney General

ANNE HIRST

Your Family Counselor

"Marriage is what I write you about and what we both want more than anything else. When we see a couple so happy in their home we are sad, wishing it were us—and we want as many children as God sees fit to bless us with." This from a 16-year-old who goes on: "The boy is 20, a sophomore in college, and he works afternoons to pay his tuition. We've gone steady for a year, and it was not love at first sight; rather I grew to love him in the tenderest way there is. . . . Our parents want us to wait two years; but we can't, for fear we won't be able to resist belonging to each other although it means so much to start our marriage right."

"He will get his associate degree soon, and has two good jobs open by which we can live comfortably. . . . I matured very young and look almost 18. In grammar-school days, I learned how to budget, cook and run a household, so those things present no problem. . . ."

"Don't you think we are ready for the responsibilities of marriage now? We know it isn't all peaches and cream; there'll be troubles greater than we know, but we can lick them together, so together we want to be."

HOPEFUL

BROW UP
This girl does not realize that the couples whose wedded life she envies suffered the same temptations she fears now. But they were strong and wise; they refused to soil their love by forbidden passion. They waited until their marriage could be blessed by their church and their families, and their life together began clean and sweet, untarnished by any blot on the escutcheon.

These two do not realize that marriage requires a character of the highest order, a faith in each other's fundamental goodness, and the never-ending practice of restraint. If they are afraid to be together now, they are certainly not fit for the responsibilities of marriage and parenthood.

TO "HOPEFUL": I repeat to you my advice to the thousands of other youngsters who have confessed this fear. You can lessen the temptation to do wrong by spending your dates further apart and arranging that they occur in less alluring circumstances. When you are together, busy yourself with practical plans for the future; talk about your fiancée's jobs and the opportunities they present. Don't be alone together so regularly; double-date with friends, swing with the crowd and keep yourselves in active circulation.

You speak of the God-given children you hope for, yet your thoughts are dwelling on the possibility of breaking one of His most solemn commandments. Would you deserve innocent children to guide through life if you contemplate sin as inescapable?

Love is not all passion. It is only true love when it brings out the best in each person. This, you two are not doing; you are too concerned with the physical, not enough with the spiritual side of life. Cultivate that now, so this lad will know he is getting a wife who is strong enough to be good, and worthy to be the mother of his children.

SOLDIER'S BIRTHDAY

"Dear Anne Hirst: I have been going steady with a soldier who is now overseas. My 17th birthday was a few months ago, but not knowing about it he did not get me anything."

"His own birthday comes soon and I don't know whether to send him something, or just a card. What do you suggest?"

"I think you are doing a wonderful job for us youngsters, and for my part I thank you."

WONDERING?

Send the soldier a birthday card by airmail. It may arrive late, so write a pretty note on it.

Say you have just learned about his anniversary and the card may not get there in time; therefore, you want him to know you are thinking of him and looking forward to the time you two can celebrate birthdays together.

This will be a gracious gesture, and the more welcome because it is unexpected.

There is no substitute for being good; it is as simple as that. Don't set the stage for temptation, and if it comes run away from it. . . . In any hour of trouble, ask Anne Hirst for courage and the strength to do right. Write her at Box 1, 123 Eighth St., New Toronto, Ont.

Having received few dividends, the old lady was irate when the corporation sent her a small cheque which was a penny short. In due time, the company sent a cheque for one cent.

When she took it to the bank, the teller asked: "How would you like it? Heads or tails?"

CAMPAIGNS TO "FORGIVE GIRARD" — At Kagohara, Japan, Fukuji Shimizu, a member of an ultra-nationalistic youth party that has launched a "Forgive Girard" campaign, shows one of his posters to Haru "Candy" Sueyama, sweetheart of U.S. Army Specialist 3/C William Girard, who is accused of accidentally killing a Japanese woman.

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM

by Gwendoline P. Clarke

I am sitting out on our back patio. A welcome breeze is blowing; robins are singing from the tree-tops a sure sign of rain. Not more than fifty feet from our back door a killdeer is nesting. We are not surprised as ever since we came killdeer have been very busy on our lawn—and they are so tame. Have you ever seen a killdeer's nest—that is if you can call what we see a nest? In a slight hollow in the grass the mother bird has laid four speckled eggs—big eggs considering the size of the bird. No attempt has been made to line the nest. It is just a hard, dry hollow on a rough piece of lawn. We would never have known it was there except that the mother and father bird came and chased Partner away when he was mowing the grass. There are very few cats in this neighbourhood so we are hoping the nest will be left undisturbed. Other species of wild life around here are a family of cotton tails, a couple of grass snakes—and mosquitoes. When we are watering the plants we think there are plenty but compared with the farm we know they are not over-abundant. Any time we drop in at the farm to look around the mosquitoes greet us in swarms. They get a good meal while we are there but what do they live on I wonder when there are no people around?

Quite apart from the result of the Federal Election (!) last week was quite interesting—in the places we went and the people we met. One visit was near here, to a home where they keep white rabbits, chinchillas and a dog like Rusty. Some of the chinchillas are worth $500 a piece. Lovely little things with fur like chiffon-velvet. Apparently they are easy to feed and keep clean—much less work than rabbits. But imagine one of those wee things being worth as much as many a highly bred registered cow! It doesn't seem reasonable but there it is. And think what it would mean to lose one.

As for the rabbits—I have always had a sneaking fancy for rabbits so I think Partner was quite relieved when we came away without any. There was a new litter too—little white bits of fluff with beady pink eyes so I imagine I might have bought a pair had we wanted them. It is really rather fatal to show one's interest in domesticated livestock. I have already been offered a kitten and been promised a canary. A bird would be something new in our house. At the moment we don't want anything at all to tie us down. We are busy doing some of the things together we have always wanted to, but never could, because, as Partner used to say "he was tied to the cows' tail."

Last Friday we spent the day on a farm near Shelburne. We were almost in time for breakfast! The weather was grand when we left here but north of Orangeville we drove through heavy rain. We thought it was coming as the lovely Caledon hills were shrouded in mist. Partner managed to milk three cows before we came home and found he hadn't forgotten the art. The cows were registered

Jerseys—and the calves like little fawns—without any spots of course. During the day the skies cleared and we were able to feast our eyes on the lovely scenery. But then the humidity closed in and the drive home was not too pleasant. We got back soon after eight, meeting a considerable amount of traffic heading north, presumably to summer cottages, which I hope they found less stifling than our house when we got back. With unsettled weather in the offing we left the place shut up and the curtains drawn. It took a while to cool the place as there wasn't a breath of air anywhere. Suddenly, it is summer.

Another interesting event was a W.I. meeting at a lovely farm home not far from Ginger Farm. It was a striking example of what can be done with old farm houses if one is prepared to spend the money. Much the same could have been done at our place. We knew it but what would have been the use with the new highway right at the front door? So we have gone modern instead and have already discovered that modern conveniences can be very inconvenient. At Ginger Farm we had an old-fashioned roll-edge bathtub—easy to get out of by grabbing the edges. Here we have a full-length streamlined affair which Partner finds is not the safest thing for arthritic joints. The first thing I did was to buy a suction rubber bath mat but even that isn't the answer. What he needs is something to hang on to to raise himself up. There is a big tap, of course, but how can one be sure the tap wouldn't come away from the wall? Has anyone any suggestions to offer? Seems to me this is something that might be taken up by Good House-keeping or a Welfare Agency. There is no doubt about it, stream-lined bathtubs are a menace to elderly or partially disabled persons, irrespective of age. Too often broken bones have been the result of slipping in the bathtub. Somebody to the rescue, please.

Modern Etiquette

by Roberta Lee

Q. Will you please list some of the expenses of the bride's parents for her wedding?

A. The invitations, the bride's trousseau, decorations for the church, soloists and organists at the church, transportation for the bride, the wedding reception, dinner or breakfast, the bride's presents to her bridesmaids, and a wedding present to the couple.

Q. If one is served a cup of coffee filled to the brim, would it be all right to bend over the cup and take a few sips so as to avoid any danger of spillage when lifting the cup?

A. You must not bend over. Take a sufficient number of spoonfuls of coffee and sip these, until you are sure you can lift the cup without spilling.

Q. When having a piece of silver for a baby marked with only one initial, should it be the first or the last?

A. The first.

Q. How does a woman secretary identify herself on the telephone to other business people, as Miss Adams, or as Helen Adams?

A. Usually, as Miss Adams. However, if she is well acquainted with the other persons and they know her by her first name, it is quite all right for her to announce herself as Helen Adams.

Q. Is it necessary for a bride-elect to reply to notes of good wishes from friends who have seen her engagement announcement in the newspaper?

A. While not necessary to write notes, she may telephone some of her friends and she most certainly should thank all those whom she meets.

Q. Is it correct to pour gravy from a gravy pitcher, or must one use a gravy ladle?

A. Either way is correct.

Q. When one has received an invitation two weeks in advance of a large dinner party in a friend's home when should one acknowledge this invitation?

A. Immediately. There is nothing so inconsiderate as keeping a hostess waiting for a reply to such an invitation.

Q. What should a girl do when a man calls at her home unexpectedly, and she has a previous engagement?

A. Tell him immediately that she is sorry, but that she has an engagement. She may, if she wishes, invite him to call again.

Q. Our son has just become engaged, and so far we have not met the family of the girl. Isn't it our son's obligation to take us to meet his fiancée's family?

A. Certainly it is, and as soon as possible.

AMBULANCE CHASING, ANYONE? — This tiny ambulance makes you think some circus midgets might have been in an accident. Actually, it is one of a number of miniature vehicles that took part in a recent traffic contest for Italian high school students, held in St. Peter's Square, Rome.

PERSONAL APPEARANCE — Nurse Adele Day is holding tiny Clifton Truman Daniel, as his grandparents, former President Harry Truman and his wife, Bess, look on. The photo was taken by the baby's father, newsmen Clifton Daniel.

PUTTING IN HIS LICKS—Sheer ecstasy is the expression on the face of this 135-pound lion as he licks at an ice cream cone held by Irene Yamato. She was a visitor to New York's new Advertising Center, the city's first permanent exhibit hall for the advertising and publishing fields.

Wonders Of Great Barrier Reef

The words "coral" and "coral islands" have generally called up visions of romance and one can remember how they not only formed the background of many stories of boyhood, but made at least one best-seller of recent times. To scientists of the last hundred years they have, however, been magnets of great attraction has not yet ceased. They have provided the most fascinating problems for the marine biologist.

Australia is a continent of the most varied scenery both coastal and inland, and one of its world-famous features is the region of the Great Barrier Reef, which is the greatest coral growth of its kind. This area provides all the beauty and also all the scientific puzzles for which man can wish.

To land on a reef of the Outer Barrier and make the visit a success one needs low spring tides, and a flat ocean surface. You will be lucky if you have both.

Assuming you have the lucky day, it is profitable to leave your launch in good hands, and to make across the reef to the outer edge at once. This is not the highest part of the reef. There is usually a slight slope downward to the extreme edge and this strip, which may be a hundred and fifty feet or so wide, is often "scalloped," that is to say, cut in here and there by little valleys.

The safest place (keeping a very watchful eye open for an unusual swell) to see things on the outer steep slope is probably at the edge of one of these valleys. Here one may look down, as it were, into the abyss, as the startlingly clear and blue water surges up and down, and see some of the branched corals growing. (Professor Stephenson of the Zoology Department, Queensland University, who viewed this underwater scene with goggles, described it as "a marvellous sight — the most impressive of all 'views' I have ever seen.")

The boulder zone is quite interesting and becomes more so as one passes inward, for the surface of the reef has depressions everywhere, and the boulders lying in them hide all sorts of quaint creatures — starfish, crabs, beche-de-mar, trochus and other mollusc shells, which avoid the terrific surf which batters the region near, and at the extreme outside.

Gradually as one passes still farther inward (towards the launch one has left behind) the water deepens, and here and there are bigger pools with sandy bottom. Very rich growth of coral and soft coral will be seen here. Finally one has to wade deeply and the lagoon of our anchorage is reached. Our visit to the real barrier is over.

One cannot conclude without saying that to get the appropriate thrill down one's spinal column when seeing the above, one ought to have been previously near enough to the Outer Barrier on a day when the sea is not calm. This gives a greater respect for the lowly creatures whose growth can withstand such battering of the ocean, and causes one to keep a weather eye whilst inspecting what is usually hidden by the restless sea. — From "Great Barrier Reef," by William J. Darkin, D.Sc.

Didn't Like His Own Company

An urgent radio message from a ship sent New York agent John Rumsey rushing down to the docks to meet—just in time—his client Freddy Lonsdale.

"What have you come over for?" gasped the agent.

"I'm darned if I know," replied Freddy. "I think I shall go back again!" And he did—by the first boat.

Freddy Lonsdale, whose comedies were the London hits of a generation ago, was one of the most restless of men. He would decide, on an impulse, to cross America, then change his mind en route.

Once he sailed from Southampton intending to visit Hollywood but left the boat at Cherbourg and returned to London. All he said was that he had suddenly changed his mind. "I was going to Hollywood to make money. I came home to find peace."

Often he would cross to his native Jersey on a last-minute impulse, intending to write there, engaging a luxurious cabin for himself, a cabin for his chauffeur-valet, Ernest Day, and space for his car. And invariably he would ask his friend Reginald Biddle, a Southampton Docks official, and his wife to dine with him before sailing because he could not bear to be alone.

Once when the Biddles could not do so he dined alone, went to his cabin, and Day started to unpack. Then, shortly before the boat sailed, he suddenly told Day to re-pack, had his car disembarked, and drove back to London. One dinner in his own company had sent him tearing back home through the night.

BEEFCAKE — Malayan muscle man Robert Teo, right, has the bulge on Ronald Low. Teo won a muscles contest in connection with a jungle movie promotion stunt in Singapore.

His daughter, Mrs. Frances Donaldson, who writes intimately of this perplexing personality in "Freddy Lonsdale," says that once he asked her to go with him from London to Liverpool and back by train in one day to see the Grand National.

As she was then living in the country she stayed the previous night at Claridge's to be ready for the early start. They were walking down the platform in the morning to find their booked seats when he suddenly stopped and asked: "Do you want to see this race?"

"No," she replied.

"Nor do I," he said. "We'll go back to Claridge's and have a decent breakfast." And that was that.

He had a caustic wit. Accosted in the Garrick Club by a stranger who asked, "Aren't you Freddy Lonsdale?" he swiftly replied, "No. Not tonight."

One New Year's Eve actor Seymour Hicks begged him to make up a quarrel he'd previously had with a man, saying: "Go over and wish him a happy New Year."

Freddy crossed the room and said to his enemy: "I wish you a happy new year . . . but only one."

Asked once if he liked New York, he turned to observe some workmen glorying in the infernal racket of their pneumatic drills. "I would," he said, "if they'd finish it."

Mrs. Donaldson gives a vivid account not only of her unusual father of the theatre world he conquered.

In Los Angeles, after scrambling in and out of a blazing apartment house helping two mothers and their eleven children to safety, Earl Livingston refused one mother's request that he dash back in once more for her TV set.

In Jupiter Cove, Fla., when Fisherman Joe Bal made a mighty cast, his hook, sinker and 150 yards of line disappeared with a tremendous roar — snagged on a twin-engine sea-plane, which came over at about 25 ft.

Tales Of Early Sporting Days

In the days when the Pelican Club was the main haunt of prize-fighting enthusiasts in Britain, members imported from Paris a master of the French style of first-and-foot boxing to give a demonstration.

Jim Donahue, a Birmingham-Irish fighter chosen to match him, had to be warned of what to expect. So John Fleming, the Pelican Club's boxing manager, told him in the changing room: "Better guard the point well, Jim, because he'll try to kick you in the mouth — that's French."

"Is it, begob?" said Jim. "Then O'll bite him in the backside — that's Birmingham!" The contest ended with a victory for Jim.

One member of the Pelican Club, recalls Guy Degby in his lively book, "Noble and Manly", was Squire George Baird, of Stitches, near Kelso, who had a retinue of "pug" friends estimated to cost him over £1,500 a week in drinks, as well as food, prizes and petty cash, apart from the damage to his town houses, fines and court fees disbursed for them.

Although he believed that money could buy everything, he was strangely glib when his attendant bruisers assured him that his punch excelled theirs, and begged him not to hit them too hard when they sparred with him.

"You're not an ordinary man, Squire," they protested. "Think what yer did to old 'Arry!" This referred to an impromptu contest held in the course of a drunken party at his John Street house, when he was said to have knocked his "pro" opponent unconscious, and was later told that unfortunate man died.

To be blackmailed for keeping the incident out of court made him so proud and happy, Degby says, that he remained blissfully unaware of the deception, even when "old 'Arry" re-emerged from isolation and went back on his payroll!

The Pelican's founders were William Goldberg, known as the "Shifter" and "Swears" Wets, but after a time it was decided that Swears should buy the Shifter out for £500. Swears invited him to dine at a restaurant, where he duly appeared with a lady friend on his arm, and the money was handed over in £5 notes.

Horried at the idea of his going on his usual nightly round with all that money in his pocket, the girl said, "Let me take care of it for you. Willie dear," and persuaded him to place half of it in her safe keeping.

Then she went home, and he and Swears spent the rest of the evening in true Pelican style.

Not until they were at breakfast at Swears' place did Swears refer again to her. Charming, very charming indeed. What might be her name?

"Dunno," said the Shifter, "never seen her before." He never saw her again, either!

Sporting fans can have a gay time with this high entertaining book which is liberally illustrated with photographs and cartoons.

How Can I?

By Anne Ashley

Q. How can I exterminate ants?

A. Keep small bags of sulphur in drawers and boxes. Or dampen a sponge in a solution of sugar and water, put it in a saucer, and place near the haunts. It will soon be full of ants and can then be plunged into boiling water.

Q. How can I make a good furniture polish?

A. Mix equal parts of turpentine, spirits of wine, vinegar, and linseed oil. Shake well and do not use much at a time.

Q. Should the milk be hot or cold when used for mashing potatoes?

A. It should be hot. Luke-warm or cold milk will make the potatoes pasty and heavy.

Q. How can I prevent sunstroke?

A. The weakest part of the spine is at the back of the neck. When in danger of sunstroke see that the back of the neck is well protected from the sun's rays.

Q. How can I remove the scorched top or bottom of a cake?

A. Grate over it lightly with nutmeg grater instead of scraping with a knife. This will leave a smooth surface for the frosting.

Q. How can I make sweet peas bloom well?

A. When planting sweet peas they should run north and south to make them bloom well.

Q. How can I prevent passers-by from seeing into a house through the window screens?

A. If the window screens are painted on the inside with a thin white paint, it will not obstruct the view of the persons inside the house, but passersby cannot see within.

Q. How can I clean rubber raincoats?

A. They can be cleaned with lukewarm water and white soap. Wipe off with clear water and hang out to dry. Never use benzene or gasoline on rubber.

WEDDING

HARRY — KETCHESON

Standards of pink and white peonies mingled with baby's breath, and interspersed with ferns, adorned the chancel rail of Hazzard's United Church, on Saturday, June 29th, at 2:00 p.m. for a lovely summer wedding when Betty Joy Ketcheson, of Madoc, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Ketcheson, became the bride of Johnson Arnold Harry, of Trenton, R. R. 5, Ontario, son of Mr. Roy Harry and the late Mrs. Harry. The Reverend J. F. Lane assisted by Mr. E. V. C. Lewis, of Madoc, officiated.

Mrs. Philo Harris, church organist, rendered the traditional wedding music, and accompanied the soloist, Mr. Harold Harris, who sang, "O Perfect Love," before the ceremony, and "The Wedding Prayer," during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, Mr. Allen Ketcheson, the bride was lovely in her waltz-length gown of white silk embroidered organza over taffeta, featuring a scalloped, scoop neckline and fitted bodice with cummerbund waistline accented by a back butterfly bow of nylon taffeta. She wore a matching pill-box style headress sprinkled with rhinestones and shoulder-length veil of white, embroidered nylon, and carried a cascade bouquet of pink roses. A single strand of cultured pearls with matching earrings completed her ensemble.

Miss Beulah Carman, of Eldorado, attended the bride as maid of honor, and Miss Isabelle Burnside, of Madoc, as bridesmaid, were attired in identical waltz-length gowns of heavenly blue dotted Swiss, fashioned on princess lines, with shawl collars, long, torso waistlines, and bouffant skirts. They wore matching pill-boxes and mitts, and carried basket-like bouquets of pink and white carnations.

Little Miss Carolyn Lewis, of Foxboro, niece of the bridegroom, was a demure little flower girl, in her pink, dotted Swiss frock with lace trim, and matching floral headress and mitts. She carried a tiny basket of white feathered 'mums.

Mr. Everett Harry, of Trenton, brother of the bridegroom, was groomsmen, while Mr. Grant Ketcheson, of Madoc, brother of the bride, and Mr. Gerald Harry, of Brockville, cousin of the bridegroom, were ushers.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in Hazzard's Orange Hall, where the bride's table was appointed with white damask, and centred by a three-tier wedding cake, flanked by tall, pink candles in crystal holders, and the bridal bouquets.

The guests were received by the bride's mother, who wore gold-tone printed crystal with white accessories, and a corsage of white feathered 'mums. She was assisted in the receiving line by the bridegroom's sister, Mrs. Malcolm Nobes, who was attired in light-blue lace and taffeta with pink and white accessories and corsage of pink carnations.

For travelling to Western Ontario and the Northern States, the bride donned a beige, corded silk duster ensemble with mint green and beige accessories and corsage of yellow roses. Upon their return, Mr. and Mrs. Harry will reside in Trenton, R. R. 5. Guests attended from Trenton, Stirling, Foxboro, Wainfleet, Toronto and Concession.

The bride, previous to her marriage, was the honoured guest at a miscellaneous shower given by Mrs. Burrell Bateman, and also at one given by Mrs. Max Burnside, with Miss Isabelle Burnside, as co-hostess.

JUNIOR FARMERS, GIRLS OF COUNTY HOLD SUCCESSFUL FIELD DAY

Madoc township boys and Thurlow township girls won softball championships Monday at the annual Hastings county Junior Farmers' field day held at the Frankford public school grounds.

In addition to the softball tournament which saw three boys' and three girls' teams competing, individual winners were determined in track and field events with outstanding boy and girl athletes being declared.

The winners will go on to the Quinte District Junior Farmers' field day held in Peterborough this year on July 20th.

Close to 150 rural boys and girls competed in the various events, which saw Douglas Burnside, of Madoc, emerge as the outstanding boy athlete. The girls' counterpart was won by Carolyn Thompson, of Foxboro.

Runners up for the boys' title were Glen Franks and Don Sherry who tied for second, while Marlene Latchford and Jean Frost tied for second place in the girls' track and field events.

Thurlow township amassed the greatest number of points with Madoc coming a close second.

Miss Isabelle Burnside, of Madoc, was named Miss Hastings, at the evening dance staged in the Frankford Community Hall. The title is determined taking into consideration outstanding effort in Junior Farmers and 4-H club work, for community endeavour and for personality.

In charge of preparing the schedule of day's events was Ross Moorcroft, president of the Hastings County Junior Farmers, assisted by Jack Riddell, assistant agricultural representative.

Presentations to captains of the championship softball nines were made during the evening dance by Jack Riddell with Griffen Ketcheson crowning Miss Burnside, who will reign as Miss Hastings for the next year.

5-MILE SECTION OF DUAL LANE TO BE PAVED

Paving of a five-mile section of the dual lane 401 highway between Trenton and Belleville is expected to get underway shortly with equipment for the job now being set up by Standard Paving Company Ltd.

Standard Paving were awarded the paving contract by the highways department for five miles of the road east from the Sidney-Murray township boundary.

W. E. Sandercock, M.L.A. for Hastings West, said recently that he expected tenders for paving other sections of the 401 highway where grading has been completed, would be called shortly.

Work on the completion of the overpass on No. 14 where it crosses 401 north of the city is progressing while at Trenton steel erectors are swinging into position the remaining sections in the last span of the bridge crossing the Trent River.

Earlier in the year the highways department announced that 401 highway would be paved from Trenton east for a distance of close to 20 miles, the intention apparently being put to this section of the highway into use so that through traffic could bypass Trenton and Belleville.

The election was deferred when Henry Hosking, Liberal candidate, died during the campaign for the June 10 general election.

BANCROFT ELIGIBLE TO ELECT DEPUTY-REEVE

Bancroft's population has increased by 1,000 during the present "boom" in that community, and thus the municipality is eligible to elect a Deputy Reeve. The new appointment gives them an extra representative on the Hastings County Council.

"Busting out all over" this uranium town is scheduled to become a community of 5,000 (from its present 1,700), according to Professor J. H. Richards, of Kingston, who recently gave a paper on the economic changes in North Hastings, to the Canadian Association of Geographers.

He noted that "the basic assumption is that uranium mining will be permanent and that the town will remain the residential and service centre. Present number of men working in area is 2,400." He also pointed out that present building trends have increased marble and granite quarrying, which has also stimulated the Bancroft boom.

MEETING HELD AT THE O'HARA MILL

The following are the minutes of a joint meeting of the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board, and the Executive, held at the O'Hara Mill Conservation Area, Madoc, on the afternoon of Thursday, June 27th, 1957.

Present were B. H. Smith, E. Sager, T. C. Graham, M. Smith, E. Wood, L. Price, and G. Nicholson. Absent were B. J. Hunt, A. E. Northey, and C. B. Ketcheson. The Secretary-Treasurer was also present.

E. Sager—L. Price—That minutes of the Executive Meeting held on May 22nd, 1957, and the joint meeting of the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board and the Executive held on June 6th, 1957, be adopted as read.

The Secretary-Treasurer gave a detailed financial report of the expenditures and balances in the Parks and Recreation Account. He noted that with the present liabilities for labour, drag-line, picnic tables and toilets, the amount budgeted for the O'Hara Mill Conservation Area, was almost completely expended. The Chairman then opened, and read to the Meeting, three tenders received for the construction of picnic tables and toilet huts from the Jos. Rashotte Co. Ltd., Tweed; J. L. Farrell, Belleville, and Gerald Bailey, Roslin.

T. C. Graham—E. Wood—That twenty-four picnic tables be purchased from the Ontario Department of Reform Institutions.

L. Price—E. Sager—The tender of Gerald Bailey, of Roslin, for four toilet huts, be accepted.

A lengthy discussion followed on the arrangements for the opening day. It was decided to have the lunch for the Minister and the Executive at the Blue's Hotel, Madoc, although a private room cannot be secured. The Meeting felt that should the weather be favourable, a very good attendance at the opening day could be anticipated.

M. Smith—E. Wood—That the Women's Institutes be guaranteed a minimum of 500 servings at 35c per serving.

M. Smith reported on the problem of securing an attendant for the summer months.

B. H. Smith—T. C. Graham—That the O'Hara Mill Conservation be opened to the public from 11.00 a.m. to 9.00 p.m. on all days of the week except Friday and that Mr. Wright, of Madoc, be engaged until Labour Day at 90c an hour as park attendant.

M. Smith—T. C. Graham—That a 21" rotary lawn-mower with power drive be purchased for use in Authority Conservation Areas.

The meeting next discussed the progress being made at the Authority property at Actinolite. It was pointed out that it was impossible to use the access road from Highway No. 37 to this property as some logs and tops had been stacked on the right-of-way, and there was a ditch constructed across the entrance. The Meeting received assurance from Reeve Lloyd Price attention would be given to this matter.

E. Sager—E. Wood—That the Authority park at Actinolite be named "The Price Conservation Area."

The Chairman reported on a recent meeting of himself, the Secretary-Treasurer, and two representatives of the Hydro Electric Power Commission, regarding the proposed Riverside Conservation Area on the West side of the Moira River above College Street. He stated that apparently nothing could be done until the matter of annexation was settled, but that the Commission representatives had given an assurance that the Authority would receive first consideration should the property become available. The Secretary-Treasurer pointed out that, as it had proved impossible to purchase the proposed Foxboro site at a reasonable price, and now the Riverside site would not be available until sometime in the next fiscal year, the Authority should consider the purchase of another park site in order to fully utilize the sum that had been set aside in the budget for acquisition of Conservation Area Lands.

L. Price—M. Smith—That T. C. Graham and the Secretary-Treasurer be authorized to obtain options on the property needed for the proposed Moira Gorge Conservation Area at Thomasburg.

The Meeting then went to the Deloro Conservation Area to consider the problem of fencing of portions of Authority property bordering on land owned by Mr. Pierre Murphy.

T. C. Graham—L. Price—That the Authority proceed on the basis suggested by Mr. Murphy namely the Authority to supply the wire and Mr. Murphy, the posts and labour to install the fence.

B. H. Smith—M. Smith—That this meeting be adjourned. The meeting was adjourned at 5.30 p.m.

B. H. Smith, Michael Chubb,
Chairman. Sec.-Treas.

INCREASED AUTOMOBILE INSURANCE RATES

The continuation of the spiraling cost of automobile accidents during the first four months of this year will mean increased insurance rates for many Ontario motorists.

The Independent Automobile Insurance Conference, following a survey of its member companies, said recently increases will go into effect on July 1.

At the same time, officials said the increases were mainly aimed at drivers with accident records and young, under-25 drivers. Accident-free drivers, they said, would be given preferential treatment. In addition, they will still receive a "no-claims discount."

No change in rates for private passenger cars operated for business purposes is contemplated.

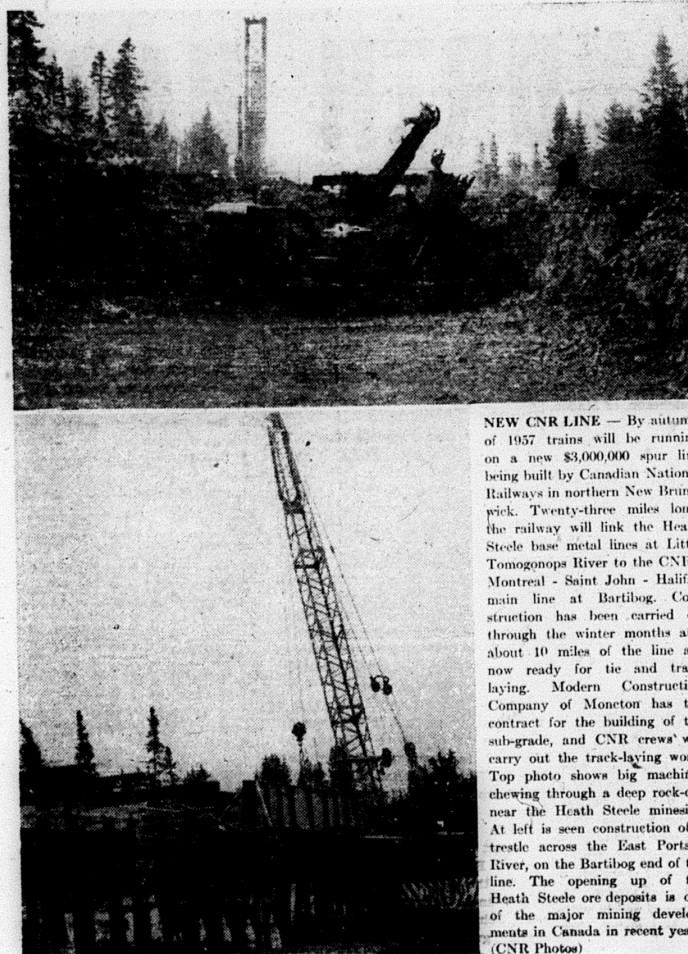

Insurance officials said that the cost of accidents in the first few months of 1957 had been the highest ever, up from 10 to 15 per cent.

The situation had been further complicated, they said, by the fact that under the present rating system the insurance companies are paying today's higher losses on premiums collected up to 18 months ago when costs were much less. The automobile insurance industry suffered substantial operating losses in 1956 due to rising accident costs.

The new rate increases were intended, insurance spokesmen said, to bring premiums more realistically in line with the rising costs of accidents. For instance, collision costs for repairs due to changes in 1957 car models, were up eight per cent over 1956 models, while the more elaborate design of all recent model cars tends to make even the most minor accident a costly affair.

Insurance premiums are based on a "you set your own rates" system, they said. "When the cost and number of accidents increase, so must insurance rates. When accident costs go down, insurance rates follow suit."

NEW CNR LINE — By autumn of 1957 trains will be running on a new $3,000,000 spur line being built by Canadian National Railways in northern New Brunswick. Twenty-three miles long, the railway will link the Heath Steele base metal lines at Little Tomogons River to the CNR's Montreal - Saint John - Halifax main line at Bartibog. Construction has been carried on through the winter months and about 10 miles of the line are now ready for tie and track laying. Modern Construction Company of Moncton has the contract for the building of the sub-grade, and CNR crews will carry out the track-laying work. Top photo shows big machines chewing through a deep rock-cut near the Heath Steele minesite. At left is seen construction of a trestle across the East Portage River, on the Bartibog end of the line. The opening up of the Heath Steele ore deposits is one of the major mining developments in Canada in recent years. (CNR Photos)

May 1, and the names of those appointed to the various committees. Dr. Burrell, the Genealogist, presented four would-be members and these were approved by the Association.

Allan Dempsey and Drury Denyes, of the Belleville district, then supervised a programme of sports of all kinds and description for young and old. A generous number of prizes were given for each event. These had been carefully chosen by Col. W. A. Davern, and were enthusiastically received by the winners.

The members of the Women's Institute looked after the booth for the sale of soft drinks, candy, etc., in the afternoon, and sold tea and coffee at the picnic supper which followed the sports. Tables were set by the bay shore and a pleasant social hour was spent by the many present. This was an opportune time to become acquainted with our own members which are drawn from five counties.

The various committees, headed by Mrs. Stan Cunningham, are to be congratulated for a "job well done." Particular mention might be made of the Property Committee under Maurice Young, and the Sports Committee under Allan Dempsey. The success of this venture predicts an annual picnic event for Dominion Day for years to come.

HONOURED AT
FAREWELL PARTY

On Thursday, June 27, a large group of friends and neighbours gathered in the Sunday School rooms of Bethesda Church to honour Mr. and Mrs. Earl Holland, prior to their departure for their new home in Madoc. A very enjoyable programme was presented before Rev. G. Teskey asked Mr. and Mrs. Holland to take seats at the front. The following address was read by Miss Lois Fleming and a lovely chrome kitchen set was presented by Carman Downey, Kenneth Holland, Cecil Holland and Burt Wickens.

Crookston, Ontario,
June 27, 1957.

Dear Earl and Lena:

We, your friends and neighbours of Crookston, have gathered here tonight to convey to you our best wishes as you embark on a new community.

Of course there is a pang in our hearts at the thought of losing you folks from our midst, but we know your new community will be more enriched by your presence.

Both you, Earl and Lena, have proven yourselves to be diligent church and community workers and you are always ready to lend a helping hand whenever a situation demanded extra co-operation.

Since your new home will be in Madoc we wish you to feel still an active and welcome part of our community. May you be seen often in our social groups and individual homes.

Please accept this token and may it convey our best wishes for a long and enjoyable life at your home in Madoc. We wish you both "God's Blessings" and a "Bon Voyage" through life.

Signed on behalf of your friends and neighbours.

Mrs. Cecil Holland then read the following address from the W.A. and Mrs. Leslie Blakely presented Mrs. Holland with a lovely table centre.

Crookston, Ontario,
June 27, 1957.

We, the members of Bethesda W.A. couldn't let you leave our midst without giving you a little remembrance. Madoc W.A. will benefit by our loss and we sincerely hope you will enjoy working with them as you did us.

One reminder of your efforts is when we walk into our church we think of how hard you and Earl worked to get carpets and get them laid.

When the first Thursday in the month comes around we hope you will remember our meeting and at any time we will be happy to have you join us.

We ask you to accept this small gift as a reminder of Bethesda W.A.

Mr. and Mrs. Holland thanked everyone for their kindness and invited everyone to visit them in their new home.

A delightful lunch was served by the ladies.

QUEEN MOTHER
PROPOSED AS
GOV.-GENERAL

The Sunday Express, London, backs a Canadian suggestion that Queen Mother Elizabeth be appointed governor-general of Canada.

"The Queen Mother would be our noblest emigrant. She would be Canada's happiest newcomer" the newspaper says editorially.

"Let the government hesitate not a moment longer. Ask her."

The Queen Mother has been mentioned in the British press lately as a possible successor to Governor-General Vincent Massey, due to retire soon.

There is a current wave of interest in Canadian affairs here since Prime Minister Diefenbaker was hailed for a dynamic contribution to the recently concluded Commonwealth conference.

HAZZARD'S W.M.S.

The July meeting of Hazzard's W.M.S. was held at the Ketcheson home, with eleven members and eleven visitors present.

Miss A. Moorcroft conducted the worship service, using the theme, "He Shepherd Me." Hymn 637 was used and 23rd Psalm was repeated in unison. The leader led in a meditation on the role of a "Good Shepherd." The worship service was closed with a poem by Ellsworth Toll, "His Dominion."

Mrs. A. Ketcheson presided for the program. The Misses Katherine Burnside and Beverly Ketcheson gave instrumental numbers on the piano. Mrs. Lewis gave an interesting talk on "Senior Citizens," and related to us just what is being done for the elderly citizens of our country.

Hymn 681 and prayer closed the meeting.

CANADIAN RED CROSS GIVES $50,000 TO AMERICAN VICTIMS

A cash gift of $50,000 was recently announced by the Canadian Red Cross Society to assist victims of Hurricane Audrey in the United States.

Marshall Stearns, Chairman of the National Executive Committee of the Canadian Red Cross Society, announced the money is being forwarded to the American National Red Cross in Washington.

"The toll of death, injury and destruction is staggering. With our gift we send the sympathy of the Canadian people," he said. "Several years ago at the time of the Manitoba floods, the American Red Cross generously donated $250,000 to assist our relief operation and that gift has never been forgotten by the Canadian Red Cross and the people of Manitoba."

"The funds of the American Red Cross have been seriously depleted by the many disasters which have faced the United States since the 1st of January and it is our hope that our gift, even in a small way, will assist their humanitarian work in this most recent disaster."

Mr. Stearns added that this is an interim gift and the Canadian Red Cross Society will be ready and willing to consider further assistance once the total impact of the disaster has been completely assessed.

President Eisenhower has personally thanked the Canadian Red Cross Society for the gift in a telegram received at National Headquarters of the Society in Toronto.

FIRST CANADIAN POTATO CONFERENCE

Canada's first national conference of those directly interested in the potato industry will be held at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, August 29-30-31, 1957. It is hoped this first conference, organized by the Canadian Horticultural Council, will arouse sufficient interest to warrant making it an annual event.

All phases of the industry will be discussed, from development of disease-resistant varieties of seed, control of disease and insect pests in the field (and, in storage, hastening maturity through killing of the tops), and prevention of the sprouting of table potatoes in storage, to the market of the crop for seed and table purposes or processing into potato chips, French fries, potato flakes, granules and other products.

Potato specialists from the Canada Department of Agriculture, Provincial Departments with important potato areas, potato marketing organizations, processing and transportation firms, potato growers, and consumers, will be taking part in the discussions.

On the opening day a panel of provincial representatives directly concerned with the growing and marketing of potatoes in their respective provinces, will review "The 1957 Potato Crop Condition and Market Prospects."

Potato growers and others directly interested in attending the conference, can make their reservations and obtain a detailed copy of the program on application to R. E. Goodin, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

JUNIOR RED CROSS OF WORLD TO MEET IN CANADA IN 1959

The Canadian Junior Red Cross will be host at an International Junior Red Cross Study Centre during the summer of 1959.

The event will coincide with the 50th anniversary of the Canadian Red Cross Society and the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Red Cross.

Invitations have been extended to 69 national Junior Red Cross Sections to send four delegates, preferably two boys and two girls from 15-18 years of age.

Canadian Junior Red Cross officials anticipate having at least 124 Juniors from 31 countries outside North America. Ten delegates from the United States will be joined by 50 Canadian Juniors.

The foreign delegates will be the guests of the Canadian Junior Red Cross while in Canada. It is proposed that the Study Centre will last for 12 days and all foreign delegates will be given one week's hospitality in Canadian homes prior to the Study Centre.

The location of the centre has not yet been announced.

GROUND OBSERVER CORPS INCREASES IN IMPORTANCE

In a military air age of radar, supersonic speed and complex electronics, the Ground Observer Corps, which employs only the human eye, is ironically taking on increased importance.

The corps comprises some 40,000 volunteers in Canada who report to 11 RCAF filter centres throughout the country on planes they spot. Corps posts—there are between 4,000 and 5,000—are designed primarily to report on low-flying aircraft which can sneak under radar beams.

Officials say that radar is of little use in spotting and tracking aircraft flying under 2,000 feet.

And, they add, the Russians have a long-range turbojet bomber which is almost as efficient at low level as at high altitude.

Moreover, a Soviet jet bomber—jets are efficient only at high altitude—could easily be tracked by the northern warning lines but then drop down to low level out of radar's range before an RCAF or U.S. Air Force jet interceptor could be guided to it by radar.

The RCAF already is taking measures to counteract the low-level threat.

CF-100 fighter squadrons are being equipped with a new navigation device which can quickly calculate a course to intercept a low flying bomber. The information fed into the device would be supplied by the Ground Observer Corps: Apparent route of the bomber and its speed.

However, this navigation apparatus is a far cry from radar itself. Radar, within its range, can track an aircraft continuously.

It is a low-flying bomber out of radar's range kept changing course, new information would have to be supplied by the Ground Observer Corps for the crew of the jet fighter to work out a new course for an interception on the navigation device.

The drawback to radar is that its signal travels in a straight line; it can't bend with curvature of the earth.

Some officials contend that not enough attention has been given to this problem since the Second World War when it was shown that aircraft could fly hundreds of miles over enemy territory without ever being detected by radar.

The RCAF has put much emphasis on the capability of its interceptors to climb higher. It had to do this after the West learned the Russians had developed a high-flying bomber.

The new models of the CF-100 climb higher than their predecessors but to gain more altitude the RCAF had to sacrifice a considerable amount of endurance—that is, the length of time a plane can stay in the air without refuelling.

MEASURING LOGS FROM WOODLOTS

Across Canada the farmer's interest in crops has always conveyed the impression that oats, barley, wheat and hay are the important things. The fact that trees are really an important farm crop has never really been considered by many farmers.

Recently, Canada Department of Agriculture's economists have been making a study of farm woodlots. They find such woodlots are an important source of sawlogs in Canada. One third of all forest land under private ownership is on farms. These woodlots cover over 13 per cent of the total farm area, and in 1955 supplied farmers with an estimated cash income of 85 million dollars.

To get the best returns from woodlots, it is necessary to know the basis on which sound sawlogs are sold for lumber. In addition to grading, actual payment for sawlogs is dependent on the number of board feet of lumber as estimated by the log rule chosen.

Use of a log rule in the measurement of sawlogs is required by law in all provinces, but buyers and sellers are free to specify in their contracts the unit of measure and the log rule of their choice. Rules now in use within the province are: Newfoundland, Newfoundland log rule; Quebec, Roy and Quebec log rules; Ontario, Ontario and Doyle log rules; Manitoba and Saskatchewan, International log rule; Alberta, Scribner log rule; British Columbia, British Columbia log rule.

Log rules are generally based on milling practices which traditionally prevailed. As conditions change, the woodlot manager needs to select the one that gives him a fair measure of the sawlogs he has for sale.

With the exception of the Doyle log rule which, in the case of small sawlogs (8 inches in diameter and 16 feet long), shows only about half the actual number of board feet which is obtainable, and the Newfoundland log rule, which estimates about one quarter more board feet, all other rules are reasonably correct and suited to the conditions which prevail in their respective province.

In a survey by the Forestry Branch of the Northern Affairs and Natural Resources Department, it was found in Eastern Canada that 90 per cent of all soft wood logs measured were 12 inches or less in diameter. It is therefore important that log rules which estimate accurately the number of board feet in smaller diameter logs be used. For Eastern Canada, the Ontario log rule promises to be one of the best.

HIGHWAY 401 IN NAPANEE AREA NOT UNTIL 1958

It will be at least 1959 before the four-lane No. 401 Highway by-pass will reach the Napanee area.

In answer to an inquiry, Napanee Town Council has been told by Hon. James N. Allan, Ontario Minister of Highways, that the present building schedule calls for the beginning of grading at the Kingston end of the incomplete section in this area in 1959 and working toward Napanee and Marysville as quickly as possible.

It is understood that the section from Trenton to Marysville and the Kingston by-pass will be completed this summer.—Napanee Beaver.

NEW PRESIDENT NAMED FOR KIWANIS INTERNATIONAL

H. Park Arnold, Glendale, California, lumberman and manufacturer, has been named President of Kiwanis International. He was elected to the number-one Kiwanis post Wednesday, June 26th, by delegates attending the 42nd annual convention of Kiwanis International in Atlantic City, New Jersey. News of Arnold's election was received by officers of the Kiwanis Club of Madoc recently.

As head of Kiwanis International, Arnold will be official spokesman for a quarter million Kiwanians in 4,350 clubs, located throughout the United States, Canada, Alaska and the Hawaiian Islands. He succeeds Mr. Reed C. Culp, Salt Lake City, Utah, businessman. Culp has held the Kiwanis post since August of 1956.

Arnold, a long-time Glendale resident, is owner and operator of a lumber yard and is a precision parts manufacturer. He is active in both business and community affairs in the Los Angeles area. He is past president of the Board of Directors of the Southern California Lumber Association, a member of the Board of Directors and a past president of the Glendale Y.M.C.A., a member of the Advisory Council of the Salvation Army for Glendale and for the state of California, a trustee of the University of Redlands, and a member of the boards of the Glendale Research Hospital and the First Baptist Church of Glendale.

The Kiwanis president-elect has been a member of the organization for 33 years. Immediately prior to his election to the number-one Kiwanis post, he was treasurer of the organization. During his career he has risen through the Kiwanis ranks, holding the positions of club secretary, club president, as lieutenant governor and governor of the California-Nevada-Hawaii District of Kiwanis International, and as chairman and member of a number of Kiwanis district committees. He also has served as a member and as chairman of numerous committees of Kiwanis International. Prior to his election to the treasurer's post, Arnold served two 2-year terms as trustee of the international service organization.

Attendance at the Atlantic City convention, Kiwanis' 42nd, numbered approximately 15,000 to make the convention the organization's largest. In addition to naming Arnold president, the delegates chose two vice-presidents, a treasurer, and six international trustees. They are: Kenneth B. Lohed, Toronto, Ont., and Everett F. Penashorn, Jamaica Plain, Massachusetts, vice-presidents; Albert J. Tully, Mobile, Alabama, treasurer; Harold O. Danner, Cincinnati, Ohio, Ben H. Hazen,

ONTARIO SCHOOL CHILDREN RECEIVE SAFETY REMINDER

The problem of persuading children to play in safe places and to keep a cautious and alert attitude in the presence of traffic, is large and continuous. With more hours available for play and other activities, the long summer holiday adds considerably to traffic dangers for children.

Each summer for the past eleven years, the Ontario Departments of Highways and Education have sought to help relieve the situation by providing a safety reminder to elementary school children, for use throughout the holiday months.

"As schools closed at the end of June," Hon. Jas. N. Allan, Minister of Highways, announces "more than 730,000 Ontario children received from their teachers an attractive cut-out, folder in the shape of a boy on a bicycle. Inside the folder are the safety rules for walking and playing the children have been taught in school. There are also rules for safe bicycling. On the back, a note to parents asks that they continue during the summer months, the safety training carried on by teachers during the school term."

In making this distribution, the Hon. W. J. Dunlop and I are hoping that the folders will be used to remind the children to be safe. The cut-out is made to stand up and can be placed so that the children can see it every time they go outdoors.

"During July, August and September last year," Mr. Allan added, "there were 26 youngsters under 10 years of age killed when they ran into the roadway or across a highway, in many cases from around parked vehicles. Much teaching is devoted to preventing or discouraging this very action. We sincerely hope that parents will do everything in their power to teach children never to run onto the road and to be sure the way is clear before they attempt to cross a street or highway."

LIBERALS DILEMMA

The Liberal party must reorganize fast, says Bruce Hutchison in The Financial Post.

Under normal circumstances, with a Conservative majority established in office, there would be plenty of time to rearrange the Liberal Party's affairs during four years of opposition.

Unfortunately for the Liberals, the circumstances are not normal because the Conservatives failed to win a majority and must soon return to the electorate for a full mandate.

OTTAWA MOVES

A very interesting session of Canada's Parliament is looming up, interesting both for the connoisseur of political tactics and for everyone concerned about the impact on all of us of economic and fiscal policies which may evolve, says The Financial Post.

So far as the economic outlook is concerned, no new policies introduced at Ottawa are likely to have drastic or disturbing effects on Canadian business. In spite of many things said on the hustings in the heat of battle, a close look at the plain arithmetic of the nation's housekeeping is pretty sure to convince the new regime that radical change is neither feasible nor necessary.

Moreover, the purely political aspect of the situation, meaning the kind of party manoeuvring or teamwork to be expected, suggests a need for moderation.

The axe of dissolution is poised precariously over the neck of the new Parliament.

The Liberals cannot depend on Mr. Diefenbaker's patience. Their time for reorganization is running out.

Much more is involved than a transference of Liberal leadership to the younger generation. The Liberal Party must also reconsider its basic policy, Philosophy and direction.

Production of walnut lumber in 1953 in Canada amounted to 53,000 feet, board measure. Ontario accounted for all of it.

QUEEN WILL OPEN PARLIAMENT OCT. 14

Queen Elizabeth will open the first session of Canada's new Parliament on Oct. 14.

Prime Minister John Diefenbaker made the announcement recently, and said it would mark the first time in Canada's history that the Sovereign would personally preside over an opening.

Parliament is usually opened by the Governor-General, the Sovereign's representative in this country. The late King George VI, when visiting Canada in the Spring of 1939, gave Royal assent to several pieces of legislation during the session then on.

Her Majesty, accompanied by the Duke of Edinburgh, will arrive in Ottawa on October 12, for a three-day visit before proceeding to Jamestown, Virginia, to attend ceremonies to commemorate the arrival of the first British settlers in that area.

Mr. Diefenbaker said he felt confident that all parties would welcome "this unique opportunity" to have Her Majesty open Parliament "and greet us as we take up our duties there."

It seemed wholly appropriate he added, that this historic event should

OBITUARY

JOSEPH WILLIAM HAYTON

A lifelong resident of the Madoc district, Joseph William Hayton, died suddenly at the Belleville General Hospital this Tuesday morning, in his 69th year, after being ill for two weeks.

He leaves his wife, the former Ottilie Bird; three sisters, Mrs. S. (Victoria) Graham; Mrs. G. (Millie) Degen and Mrs. E. (Laura) Fowler, all of Peterboro, and two brothers, Winfred, of Madoc township, and J. Stanley, of Foxboro.

Born in Madoc township, Mr. Hayton farmed there before joining the Department of Highways in the village. He was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Hayton, was a member of Trinity United Church and fraternally was a member of Madoc Lodge, No. 48, A.F. & A.M., and Hazzard's L.O.L., No. 1113.

He will be remembered for his part in the village. This would make it possible for "many more Canadians to see Her Majesty on this occasion than would otherwise be the case."

The Queen and her husband, in view of their short stay in Canada, will not visit any other place but Ottawa.

ANNE HIRST

Your Family Counselor

"Dear Anne Hirst: I am embarrassed to speak of such a thing, but a dear friend of mine in her 60's is being so upset by her husband's behavior that she has begged me to appeal to you for advice. They have been married 45 years, and she is dignity personified, fine-looking, graceful, a valued church member and loved by us all. Her husband is retired, and though clever and as honest as they come, he is 'growing childish' as she calls it. He makes a daily spectacle of himself in our town. He neglects her outrageously; he just prances around town ogling the young girls and causing snickers and smart cracks that annoy all his old friends.

"The irony of it is that I really think he believes the girls enjoy his smirking; of course, they smile back at him, but I don't know what will become of his blood pressure.

"This dear friend understands her husband, and knows that beneath all this nonsense he loves her devotedly. But she is self-conscious and eager to shield him from criticism; yet she doesn't know how to cope with this. Can you offer any suggestions that might stop him from making such a fool of himself?"

the only protection against complete senescence is being among young people, preferably the opposite sex. He is convinced that their very proximity can somehow restore his fading strength. Parading along the sunny streets, preening himself like a strutting peacock, he revels in all this beauty passing by and misinterprets amused glances for encouragement. "If a man is as young as he feels," he whispers, "then I belong right here!" Excited by the attention he arouses, he feels his aging arteries relax, and strides back to his wife with a new glint in his eye, satisfied that he has proved his point.

While she, poor soul, smiles back at him and wishes to heaven he'd stay home where he belongs. She will not hurt him for the world, so she listens to his superlative reports and prays for patience. She will not have to pray long. One day his strength will fail him and he will find he cannot walk another block. Or some snip of a girl will call, "What's your line, Grandpa?" and the boy with her will tell him off. That will be the end. The old gentleman will quietly collapse on his front porch and be content thereafter to view the passing scene from his favorite chair. Should this wife concern herself about what their friends are saying, she will remember that her husband is not the only offender whom they have seen. They still love her and respect her, and she can be assured she has their unspoken sympathy.

STOPS EATING OTHERS

"Dear Anne Hirst: For over three years I went with a young man. Then we had a quarrel. I started seeing someone else, but it didn't work. I found I still loved the first boy... We tried to reconcile, though he had been dating another girl. Now we see each other occasionally and he swears he loves me—but he still dates her.

"I've come to the point where I just can't see anybody else. My heart goes after him, so I cannot enjoy being with another boy. Am I wasting my time in useless hope? Or do you think he will come back?"

OLIVE

How can I predict what this boy will do? If he loves you as he recently claimed, he would not have time for anyone else. So long as he does, you had better realize he is not serious about you.

Start seeing other young men you like. You won't enjoy it at first, but you'll be amazed how soon their attentions will cheer you up. Instead of sitting alone wishing for the one you care for, you'll find yourself looking forward to tomorrow's date. This should move your sweetheart one way or another: if he does care deeply, he will give up the other girl; if he still sees her, you will know you are wasting your time even remembering him.

So don't sit at home feeling sorry for yourself. Get out and mix with girl and boy friends, and you will find life far brighter than it seems today.

Anne Hirst is your unseen friend, standing by to guide you through life's perplexing problems. You can be sure of her wisdom and her sympathy, and she never betrays a confidence. Address her at Box 1, 123 Eighteenth St., New Toronto, Ont.

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM

by Gwendoline P. Clarke

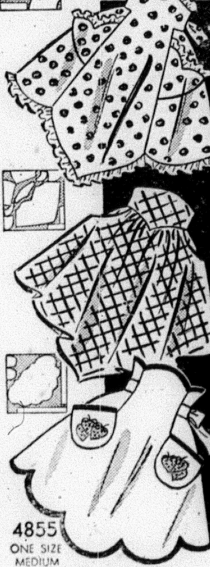

We begin to feel as if we belong here now. We have our name on the mail-box and a name plate on our front lawn. Not only that but a representative of the "Welcome Wagon" came calling yesterday. Ever heard of the Welcome Wagon? I had only a dim idea of what it meant but now that I know more about it I think it is a wonderful set-up. Not because of what is given away but because it gives newcomers a feeling of recognition. Farm folk may not know what I am talking about so I'd better be more explicit. It is a practice that is steadily gaining ground in Ontario. Apparently trade-people in the nearest business section agree to contribute towards the "Welcome Wagon," which means that a representative calls upon all newcomers to the district, bringing with them courtesy cards from those who wish to contribute and stating to what extent. The cards have on them the name of the sponsor and ask the newcomer to present this card so we may have the pleasure of making your acquaintance and you will receive a gift with our compliments." In this district the local newspaper promises a three-months' subscription; a garage, a dollar off any purchase or service; another garage offers a free car wash or lubrication; one drugstore sent along a box of band-aids; a florist shop a gay little potted plant; another garage a map of the township (most useful).

Other merchants were satisfied to send a card asking you to call and receive a gift. At first sight that did not appeal to us too well.

As I said to our lady-caller no one feels like walking into a store, presenting a card and asking for the promised gift. She agreed but, explained that trades-people are especially anxious that newcomers at least present their cards as that is the only way the sponsors have of knowing whether their offer of service is reaching the people.

It is, of course, a form of advertising it costs money, so naturally the trades-people want to know whether it is worthwhile — whether it really helps them to make contact with new residents. The Welcome Wagon also sends along informative literature... a circular letter of welcome from the Reeve; folders from the Motor Vehicles Branch of the Department of Highways — and from Automobile Insurance companies; also from the Canadian Cancer Society stating what local assistance is available. A card from the Funeral Home and Ambulance service and one from the nearest circulating library.

The official hostess who called upon us was a friendly, helpful, easy-to-know sort of person. I am afraid if she stayed everywhere as long as she stayed here she wouldn't get in many calls during the day. But we seemed to have so much in common. And then, of course, Partner came along with a number of questions. Altogether our visitor was very helpful and left us with the impression that the Welcome Wagon was an excellent innovation that trades-people should not hesitate to sponsor. And if it seems helpful to us what would it mean to newcomers from another country?

In our case we know this locality pretty well — that is why we settled here. We like the feeling of still being in the country and yet within easy distance of transportation to and from Toronto. But of course this is our first experience with the business section and as we more or less intend to "shop at home" we are very glad to know when and where goods and services are available. We still like our little village store and have no intention of making weekly trips to a recently opened shopping plaza, which I believe is the nearest big shopping centre to this district.

We are still finding plenty to do around here. Someone asked us if we were a retired couple. Well, that was our intention — but sometimes I wonder! One day last week Partner went up to the farm with Johnny and brought back some hardwood planks that he had been saving for future use. I don't know what he intends doing with them but certainly good dry hardwood is worth keeping on hand. Another day I went down to Oakville and visited with Joy and our grandson. Ross was on his best behaviour. Joy had some shopping to do so she wrapped Ross up in his blanket and laid him in the bottom of the shopping cart. Another shopper looked at him and exclaimed—"Well, now I've seen everything. A shopping cart as a baby-buggy!" Ross thought it was just all right. Through the wire walls he could see in every direction. Another shopper stopped and asked if I had bought the baby. "Yes," I answered, "he was a week-end special!"

CONVERTIBLE — From crew cut to long tresses, normally a two-year job, can now be accomplished in a split second. Yolande Tornell, demonstrates the latest teen-age fad—panty-tail wigs, made of natural hair. Ranging in length from 14 inches to 16 inches, the hairpieces are priced from $25 to $45, and are made by attaching hairs, one or two at a time, to a piece of silk.

WEE LADIES AID SOCIETY — Deeply engrossed in their mercy mission, these young "Florence Nightingales," rush a patient, a "sick doll," to the hospital. The "nurses," Susan O'Brien, 3, left, and Judy Gambale, 5, are next-door neighbors.

KEEPING A COOL HEAD — Ice cream salesman George Carpenter beats the heat by sticking his head in with the popsicles and the rest of his wares. He can check the inventory while he's there, too.

Separating Pair Split Furniture

Recently a husband who had been barred by a court order from entering his home, pending a divorce petition, sought permission to go there in order to attend to his buggerigars — "one of his passions in life."

Divorce judges must sometimes pray for the wisdom of Solomon. They often have to decide not only on the custody of the children of estranged couples, and family pets, but also such varied objects as razors, toy trains — even a motor-mower!

One judge scratched his head in bewilderment when asked to make an order concerning a husband's false teeth. They had, the man claimed, been unlawfully detained by his wife.

Pets are frequently the subject of such legal decisions. In Los Angeles a judge awarded the custody of a collie dog to a nineteen-year-old wife. He stipulated, however, that her husband should be allowed reasonable access to the dog from time to time.

One of the oddest of such cases concerned a Maltese terrier belonging to a Hollywood dancer who obtained a divorce in 1948.

She was given the custody of it and was, annoyed when the judge ruled that her former husband should be allowed to see the animal occasionally. The judge wouldn't listen to her argument that her ex-husband drank too much and would teach the dog bad habits!

After their divorce in Des Moines, Iowa, one couple couldn't agree as to who should have the car. The judge decided for them. The husband should drive it at night, the wife by day.

And in another court, when a separating couple quarrelled over an item of furniture, the judge ordered it to be sawn in half!

Although a Chicago husband claimed that his marriage had broken up because his wife "fell in love with the television," it was she who was awarded the custody of the set. But the judge said there would be no alimony.

Suing for divorce in Piedmont, California, a wife said her husband thought too much of his model railway, and asked if she might have the trains.

When an Indian wife petitioned for divorce on the ground that her husband stayed up all night with his model railway, she asked for the custody of all their property. The husband didn't deny the charge but argued that she had no right to the trains.

The judge eventually agreed to the wife's claim, with the rider that her husband should visit her once a fortnight to play with his toy trains.

A razor was the subject of dispute in recent action. During the thirteen years of their marriage, said the indignant wife, her husband had forced her to shave him. Even when they separated he insisted on her doing so.

The wife was given a divorce and told to give her husband the custody of the razor.

In 1955 the judge gave "temporary custody of the power mower" to a husband from Indiana, on condition that he cut the lawn every week for his wife!

Son — Dad, may I have two dollars?

Father — Son, do you know the value of a dollar?

Son — Of course I do. That's why I asked for two.

FIVE-STAR FINAL—Most newsmen will agree they've never seen a city editor that looks like the gentleman on the left. But the gentleman—King Clark Gable—is real enough for 66 real newspapermen who are playing in the film, "Teacher's Pet." Gable, as editor of the "New York Chronicle," is shown with Hollywood columnist Erskine Johnson. An authentic editorial room—a copy of that in the New York World-Telegram and Sun—was made for the filming.

Won The Title—But Didn't Get It

It was one of the great ironies of the boxing game that Young Billy Stribling of Macon, Ga., should have fought Mike McGigue of the County Clare and New York the second time in the State of New Jersey. Maybe the fact that the mix-up took place on the eve of April Fools' Day, 1924, had something to do with it. For the fact is that the "Georgia Peach," with the down of 19-year-old youth on his cheeks, soundly whipped lightweight champion McGigue—but he didn't get the title.

What saved McGigue his crown was the New Jersey law forbidding decision bouts; a fight either ended in a knockout, or a "no decision" was declared. The referee, the sports writers, and the 14,000 fans at the 113th Regiment Armory in Newark were unanimous in their opinion that champion McGigue did not win one round of the twelve. But Stribling couldn't put the Champ away for keeps.

McGigue, of course, knew what he was doing all the time. Ever since he took the title from Battling Siki the year before he'd been holding on to it for dear life — taking no chances. And when he agreed to box Stribling in Newark, the wily McGigue figured that with his experience in the ring he could keep his chin out of the way of a knockout punch for 12 rounds.

It was clever figuring, but McGigue almost out-smarted himself out of the championship. In the tenth round Young Stribling floored the champ with a beautiful right hand to the jaw. McGigue staggered to his feet, and from there to the end of the fight only Stribling's over-eagerness kept the champ from being knocked out. The Georgia youngster simply lacked the experience to put away this man he plainly had set up for the kill. He rushed McGigue, swinging wildly, and the cagey champ managed to evade Stribling's punches or tie him up in clinches.

One thing Stribling demonstrated without a doubt, at least. That was that he had probably beaten McGigue in Georgia several months previously, in their first fight. The champion had brought his own referee with him for the bout, and nearly brought on a shooting when the referee called the fight a draw. After the second meeting, it was the consensus that Stribling could lick McGigue any day of the week. This he never got a chance to prove, however. McGigue never took a chance with the Georgia boy again.

From the opening bell of the Newark bout, it was apparent that Stribling had the champion's number. He took after Mike like a tiger, and the champ quickly got on his bicycle. McGigue was guilty of so much stalling, clinching, and running, that his prestige was damaged.

It was a case of youth against experience — 19-year-old Stribling against 29-year-old McGigue and the youngster proved to be the stronger. Trained to the proverbial razor's edge, his long, smooth muscles rippling under the pink skin, his eyes bright and his head erect. Stribling simply outgunned the champion. Time after time he broke loose from Mike's clinches by brute strength, and on other occasions pulled and shoved the champ around the ring to get him set up for a clean punch.

Stribling relied mainly on his left hand to outbox McGigue. He stuck his left paw in the champ's face so many times, McGigue must have thought he was battling a centipede wearing boxing gloves. Stribling alternated his left jabs to the face with vicious shots to the mid-section that made McGigue grab and hold on for dear life. Three times during the fight it appeared that Stribling had McGigue ready for a knockout. In the third round he caught Mike with a one-two on the button that draped the champ over the ropes. But McGigue staggered through the round. In the ninth two left hooks and a straight right to the jaw had the champ holding on again. Still Stribling couldn't finish him.

The tenth round was the fight's high spot. It was here that the "Georgia Peach" ripped McGigue with a right hand haymaker that sent the champ crashing to the floor, his head through the ropes. Mike was up before the count, but he seemed to be out on his feet.

The crowd jumped up, screaming, "Finish him! Finish him, Strib!" But Stribling, seeing the crown almost within his grasp, was too anxious. He swarmed all over McGigue, battering him against the ropes with lefts and rights, swinging madly instead of calmly measuring his man for the one knockout blow. McGigue rolled with the punches and took some on his arms, acting with the instinct of the veteran ringman. When the bell rang he was still on his feet, but so groggy he started to walk toward a neutral corner instead of his own.

In the 11th and 12th rounds Stribling continued his over-anxious ways. It was plain that McGigue was glassy-eyed, arm weary, ready for the finisher. Yet he managed to last out the two rounds, and saved his title. When the fight was over, if McGigue didn't realize he'd met his master, at least the crowd did. Stribling was accorded a standing ovation.

The Georgia youngster was seconded, as usual, by his father, "Pa" Stribling, while "Ma" Stribling, his trainer, occupied a rickshaw chair back of his corner. The kid's first request after the fight was for a piece of candy. Stribling never did win the championship.—By Arthur Bern in The Police Gazette.

ORANGE CELEBRATION HELD AT BELLEVILLE

Parade-lovers had a perfect day last Saturday as they watched the Orangemen of the county and district march down Belleville's streets, banners waving and spirits on high.

The occasion was 267th "Orange Walk", in which close to 1,500 members participated.

County Marshall Seymour Bushell, L.O.L. 274, in the role of "King Billy," led the parade from the fair grounds, astride a white horse.

Following him were the various Orange lodges, women's groups and juvenile lodges.

No parade is complete without a band and Saturday's event was no exception. Many lodges were present with their pipe and drum bands. Colorful kilie pipe bands added sparkle to the parade. Majorettes in bright uniforms strutted high as they marched by with the Quinte Pipe Band.

Thousands of spectators lined the parade route, especially in the downtown areas.

The warmth of the weather appeared to add to the fervor of the speeches as all good Orange-folk were called upon to remember William III of Orange as he led his army on the Boyne in 1690 to stamp out the invaders of James II of England.

Guest speaker of the day, Right Worshipful Brother Archie Miller, Grand Master for Ontario East, was "never more delighted with the increase in the number of Orangemen and women," and added that the Orange movement seems to be on the "up" again.

Orange lodges, he claimed, are doing a "marvellous" job of spreading propaganda about the movement. He appealed for contributions to the $75,000 "extension fund", which is being used to conduct publicity campaigns to tell the story of the Orange movement. Mr. Miller was particularly pleased with the strength of the Orange Lodges in British Columbia.

While there were many lodges in the parade carrying banners, there were several that did not, and so marched with other lodges.

The price of some soft drinks was raised one cent this week, owing to the increased cost of crowns, sugar, extract and glass.

Small bottles of Coca-Cola and 7-UP remain at seven cents while all other brands are now eight cents.

A carton of soft drinks now sells at 41 cents, plus deposit.

LEE FAMILY HELD REUNION AT TWEED

On July 7th, the Annual Lee Reunion was held at Tweed Park. A large number of family and friends attended. With the exception of a few years, it has been an annual event since 1935.

After a bountiful dinner the group was called to order by secretary, Jack Martin, and a short business meeting followed. The minutes of last year's meeting were read and George Lee was elected secretary for the coming year.

Small gifts were given to the oldest couple, the youngest baby, the most recently married, the largest family and the persons from farthest away.

The date was set for next year, on the first Sunday in July, at the Tweed Park. In case of bad weather, it will be held on the following Sunday.

The remainder of the day was spent in visiting, reminiscing and water sports.

RALLY HELD IN SPRY SETTLEMENT

Spry Settlement Sunday School and Church Rally was held on Sunday, July 7th, at 2 p.m., on the lawn of Mrs. Percy McCann, with attendance of around 125.

A. Smith, of Belleville, opened the Service with the hymn, "Amazing Grace." Rev. Pressy, of Madoc, introduced the Clarke Singers from Oshawa, who sang, "Won't You Come and Go?", with guitar and accordion accompaniment. Mr. and Mrs. Smith and daughter, Gail, of Belleville, sang "Keep on the Firing Line." Mr. W. J. Smith, of Centreville, led in prayer.

The children went through their songs with Mrs. Jack Smith, Madoc, as leader. Duets were rendered by Diane Bronson and Arthur Pressy, of Madoc, with guitar accompaniment, and by the Smith family, "We'll Talk It Over in the By and By." With Mrs. Hulin at the piano, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Smith, Madoc, sang, "With Each Step I Take." Mr. and Mrs. Clarke and Miss Caverly, of Oshawa, sang, "When He Reached Down His Hand for Me."

Rev. Pressy read the Scripture lesson and Mr. A. Smith gave the Message. Mr. Clarke sang, "The Old Time Camp Meeting." Mrs. DeMille and Mrs. Armstrong, of Madoc, sang "It Took a Miracle." The Clarkes sang, "For He Shall Be Just Like a Tree."

The Rally closed with prayer.

SCOUTS TO ESTABLISH AIR LIFT RECORD

When one thousand three hundred and sixty-four Canadian Boy Scouts fly to England next July 17 to 29, to attend "Jubilee J-I-M", a world Scout gathering, a new record for mass air lifts from Canada to the U.K. will be established, it is believed.

Jubilee J-I-M is a three-phase event featuring a Boy Scout Jamboree as well as a gathering of leaders, known as an Indaba, and a meeting of Rover Scouts (older Boy Scouts) called a Moot. The J-I-M will be held at Sutton Coldfield, Warwickshire, (near Birmingham) from August 1 to 12, and a total attendance of 35,000 Scouts from over 80 countries is anticipated.

Trans Canada Airline is handling arrangements whereby 15 planes, with passenger capacities ranging from 60 to 114, will ferry the Canadian Scouts to and from Britain. All Canadian air-borne Scouts are scheduled to land at Heathrow Airport, London. Some 130 other Canadian Scouts and Leaders are travelling independently to England to bring the total of the Canadian Contingent to J-I-M to 1,494.

Mrs. Claude Blakely gave a Christian Stewardship talk showing we can keep our love kindled for Christ.

Mrs. Cecil Blackburn conducted a program, using "Christian Citizenship" as her theme. She was assisted by Mrs. Beryl Carman.

Mrs. Fred Lane closed the meeting in prayer.

The hostess served refreshments which were enjoyed by all.

This is the time of year when the weaker sex will put tops on jars of fruit with their hands which the stronger sex will spend the next winter removing with a wrench.

CANADIANS CAN EXPECT DROP IN COFFEE PRICES

Canadians can expect a drop in the price of coffee following the reduction in the United States, a food store executive said recently.

Three large grocery chains in the U.S. have announced the price of their own coffee brands will be cut four cents a pound.

The reduction in Canada will be affected by the fact Canadian coffee is blended from beans grown in British protectorates, while the U.S. coffee is bought mainly from Brazil.

Advice to singers: Smile and the world smiles with you, but cry and you will sell two million records.

Prince Philip Stars On Television

by Tom A. Cullen
NEA Staff Correspondent

LONDON — American television will be overlooking a bet if it doesn't snap up the Duke of Edinburgh for a guest appearance when he accompanies Queen Elizabeth on her formal visit to the United States in October.

"Number One Fella, Belong Mrs. Queen" — which is what New Guinea natives call the Duke — is now "Number One Fella" of British television, with his second TV appearance in five weeks already in rehearsal.

Learned societies and royal charities are now vying for his unpaid services, while the mouths of commercial sponsors water with envy. As one sponsor puts it, "The Duke performs as though he were born in the glare of TV cameras with a microphone in one hand."

But the Duke is also the TV producer's biggest headache. Before the American networks go rushing off to sign him up as a guest star they should be warned that the Duke is not easily controlled.

Prince Philip is headstrong. He has his own ideas concern-reports from an Italian scientist on the smoking rim of Vesuvius and from a Swiss glaciologist 12,000 feet up the Jungfrau.

The Duke was chosen for the narrator's job in his capacity as a Fellow of the Royal Society. Comments Sir David Brunt, secretary of the Royal Society: "I know of no man whose interests in scientific and technological advances are so wide and alive."

If the Duke is a stand-out on TV, Queen Elizabeth has much to learn concerning television technique and is in bad need of an advisor to do for her what Robert Montgomery has done for President Eisenhower.

She has yet to learn, for example, how to depart from a prepared script by memorizing a few lines at the beginning and end, which would give warmth to her speech — and televiewers a chance to see her eyes.

During her recent televised speech at the royal banquet given in her honor in Denmark, the Queen never once lifted her eyes from her script. Viewers saw only her brow and sparkling tiara, the cameras having been placed at an odd angle above her head.

To make matters worse, the Duke apparently had not been Fundamental rules for cooking fish are few and easy to follow. The principal differences in types of fish is in fat content. For instance, salmon and snad are fat fish and are desirable for baking, broiling, and planking. Lean fish such as cod and haddock are especially desirable for boiling or steaming. All fish may be fried. There are so many exceptions to the above rule, that, if allowances are made for the fat content, any fish may be cooked in almost any way. The most important thing to remember in cooking fish is not to over-cook it. It should flake easily from the bones, be moist and tender, and have a natural delicate flavor.

Frying Fish

Fish may be either pan or deep fried. Cut fish in serving portions and sprinkle both sides with salt and pepper. Dip in beaten egg blended with a small amount of milk, roll in crumbs. For pan frying have about 1/4 inch of melted fat in a heavy skillet. Fry at moderate heat. Brown on one side and turn to brown other side. The cooking time will be about 10 minutes. Serve with lemon or sauce. For deep frying, put fish, after coating, in basket. Have kettle half full of fat at 375° F. Cook fish to even, golden brown — about 3-5 minutes. Drain on absorbent paper.

Baking Fish

Baked fish may be stuffed or baked plain. Bread stuffing of almost any favorite variety may be used for fish. For a 4-5 pound fish, you'll need about 1 1/2 teaspoons salt, 4 tablespoons butter and 3 slices of bacon. Rub inside of fish with salt (if stuffing is used, put it in the fish at this point and sew or close with skewers). Place fish in greased baking pan, brush with melted fat and lay slices of bacon across top. Bake at 350° F. for 40-60 minutes, or until it flakes easily with fork. Baste occasionally, if fish seems dry. Serve immediately with lemon or sauce.

Broiling Fish

To broil fish fillets, sprinkle both sides with salt and pepper. Place on preheated greased broiler pan about 2 inches from heat; brush with melted fat. Broil 5-8 minutes or until slightly brown, baste with melted fat and turn carefully. Brush other side with melted fat and cook 5-8 minutes or until fish flakes easily when tested with fork.

The following tuna loaf, which serves 8-9, requires 14 ounces of the fish.

HAWAIIAN TUNA LOAF

2 cans tuna (7-ounce)
1/4 cup grated onion
1 tablespoon chopped pimiento
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
2 eggs
1 cup milk
1/2 cup pineapple syrup
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 cup drained pineapple tidbits (14-ounce can)

Beat eggs with milk. Mix all ingredients except pineapple together and turn into lightly greased baking dish 8x8 inches. Arrange drained pineapple tidbits evenly over top of mixture. Decorate with bits of pimiento. Bake at 325° F. for about 45 minutes. Cut in squares and serve with Savory Cream Sauce.

SAVORY CREAM SAUCE

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
Dash monosodium glutamate
1 1/4 cups milk
2 tablespoons chopped or shredded green pepper.
1 tablespoon grated onion
Melt butter and blend in dry ingredients. Add milk, ground pepper and onion and cook stirring constantly, until thickened — about 5 minutes. Keep warm over hot water until ready to serve.

If you like a subtle blending of spices, onion, and sour cream, try this halibut in sour cream.

HALIBUT IN SOUR CREAM

2 pounds halibut steaks or fillets, fresh or frozen
1/2 cup flour
1 1/4 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon paprika
Dash pepper
1/2 cup onion rings
1/2 cup butter, melted
1/2 teaspoon crushed sweet basil
1 cup sour cream
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
Thaw fish, if frozen. Cut into serving-size pieces. Roll in flour seasoned with salt, pepper, and paprika. Cook onion in butter until tender. Remove onion, and save. Place fish in pan and fry at moderate heat. Brown; turn carefully and brown on other side. Approximate time of cooking, 10 minutes. Cover top of fish with onion, sweet basil and sour cream. Cover and simmer for 5 minutes, or until fish flakes easily when tested with fork. Garnish with parsley. Serves 6.

Fish salads are popular during the summer months, and tuna, salmon, shrimp, lobster, and crab are among the best liked of these. Diced celery is an ingredient of almost all fish salads, used either in the same proportion as the fish or somewhat less. Some recipes call for a little grated onion, others for diced sweet pickle and some for the addition of diced hard-cooked eggs.

Marie Antoinette Fashion Setter

More than one hundred books have been written for and against Marie Antoinette. . . . We here are concerned only with her love for and appreciation of beautiful apparel and her luxurious wearing of it. What she did to help provide women with income from sewing is also an important factor in the story of the dressmakers of France.

Two great arbiters of elegance who imposed their taste on the whole of Europe were Marie Antoinette and her dressmaker, Rose Bertin. During their era life-size dolls depicting Paris styles were sent from Paris to London and from there they were sent to other countries. Orders came into Paris for copies of the costumes shown on these wooden mannequins — this before there was a fashion press and before pictures were available. Later small dolls were dressed and sent to every civilized country as sales emissaries from which orders were taken.

By the number and variety of the creations of the period of Louis XVI, Marie Antoinette occupies an important place and a particular interest in the history of feminine costume. The dress with "elbow paniers"—so called because it was so very easy for the lady to rest her elbows on them—was worn only at the court, the theatre, or for great balls. These full-skirted dresses made sitting a real problem, which meant the wearers grew very tired and so resting the elbows was a help.

For ordinary life, dresses called "polonaise," simpler and more practical, were worn by the members of the court and Marie Antoinette herself. An ingenious system of cords — divided this sweeping skirt into two wings and a pouf at the back. . . . It operated like a curtain cord and allowed the skirt to trail majestically behind the wearer whenever a long skirt was desired, or to be lifted readily for the carriage. These and many other transformations of the "polonaise" dress were brought into use and became generally popular. . . .

Marie Antoinette became a real dictator of French fashion for her edicts were announced in such a way as to become decrees. One day when she appeared at court wearing a new and unusual shade of brown taffeta, the king said it reminded him of the color of a flea. Thus the shade puce (flea) was launched. Another time she wore another brown dress, a pale ash shade of satin. The king thought the new color matched her hair. This color became popular and to make certain the new fabrics were exact matches, samples of the queen's hair were sent to the silk manufacturers. . . .

We can believe, after reams of reading, that Marie Antoinette had only one great ambition: to be loved by her court and subjects. About the only means she had to express herself was through fashion. She had no political aptitude, so she, with help from her loyal devotee, Rose Bertin, a French milliner who was originally a peasant girl, made fashions that will be talked about in every period so long as fashions last. — From "Dressmakers of France," by Mary Brooks Picken and Dora Loues Miller.

The United States Embassy in Rome publishes a folksy little weekly news bulletin to keep the staff up on the latest gossip, goings and comings, etc.

DUKE OF EDINBURGH AND ADMIRERS—Arm waving doesn't work ing the programs on which he appears, and criticism and advice are not usually welcomed. He also thinks nothing of running over-time, a falling which could lead to an epidemic of peptic ulcers in Madison Avenue.

His recent televised talk on his Commonwealth tour, billed as "Around the World in 40 Minutes," turned out to be more nearly 55 minutes, with the Duke mumbling an "Oops, sorry about this" at the end.

The acid test will come when the Duke will appear as narrator on British Broadcasting Corporation's most ambitious TV undertaking to date, "This Restless Sphere," a one-hour program to inaugurate the International Geophysical Year.

Standing beside a six-foot, illuminated globe, the Duke will cue-in live and recorded material from 12 countries, including the United States and Soviet Russia.

The live material will include warned that he was to be in vision during most of the speech. As a result, he fidgeted, wore his agonized "banquet" expression, once stole attention from the Queen by scratching his ear.

Should they succeed in lining up the Duke as a guest star, the American TV networks might find the following tips useful:

The Duke refuses to wear make-up before TV cameras, thought he will consent to a light dusting of his face with powder. As the Duke's hair is blond, his complexion fair, he is apt to have a "washed out" appearance on the TV screen.

The Duke pays not the slightest attention to semaphore signals from the control room. Technicians can (but in Britain don't) wave their arms until they are blue in the face, the Duke is oblivious.

Nor does he suffer criticism gladly, one reason being that he gets so little of it in his immediate circle.

Hollered "Whoa" To Stop Tractor

Surrounded as I am by the Age of Speed, I have my thoughts. Although they are illegal, the Hollywood Mufflers go down our hill and rend the quiet country air, and the merry youngsters wave at me pleasantly as they regain control and get their hot rods in a straight line again. Those of us who did our hot rodding on a bicycle or in a Tin Lizzy should be permitted some little place to sit quietly and reflect.

I have seen attempts to make the general subject of hot rodding respectable, with insistence that the hot rodders are really serious-minded juveniles eager to promote highway safety, prudent speeds, and aid in the general welfare and common defense. That is not the kind of hot rodder we have going down over our hill.

In all fairness to me, the truth is that in my own good time I made my automobile go just as fast as it could, too. The speedometer in my model T was geared to a cog on the front wheel and the minute the vehicle gained motion the needle would shoot up to 90 miles an hour and stay there until we stopped. Although this indication bore no relationship to actual affairs, it was daring back then to go 90 m.p.h. even in imagination.

I have no idea how fast we really did go. The roads, then, were seldom paved, and any speed faster than a horse could lope was equivalent to jet speeds of today. There were also mechanical reasons why high speeds were inadvisable, one of them being that the engine just wouldn't turn up anyway, and others being the lubricating system, the tires, the windshield, and the steering assembly. Those of us old-time hot rodders who remember how a front end would jackknife in soft sand will now shudder in unison at the thought.

Something of those days came back to me the other day when my father drove my tractor. He wanted to help with the planting, and I suggest he bring the seedlings. The next thing I knew there was a bang and a crash, and I looked up to see him coming down across the field with the tractor in wild flight. Somehow he had thrown the gearing into neutral and accosted a down-grade at the same time, a situation not wholly wise if you are on the seat. Top speed with my tractor is supposed to be ten miles an hour, in gear, but on a free roll it will get those big tires going and do quite a stint.

Dad didn't mean to stunt that way, but he doesn't drive the tractor much and something confused him. He steered the thing adequately, and coasted to a halt in the gully, and after a bit got back into gear and came along bringing the transplants I said, "Dad, did you know that while you were running away you hollered 'Whoa!'"

This was a hot-rod joke at one time. Dad reached back in to his unconscious a long way, and since in his youth he had called "whoa" at many a gailvanting horse along these ancestral slopes, there is nothing remarkable in his doing it again to a tractor. Dad said, "I was willing to do anything, if it'd work."

Sam Litchfield was the local character who, back around 1915, brought home a new automobile, drove it into the barn, and hollered "Whoa!" It went out the back end and landed in a heap on the manure pile. Every town had somebody who did that, and it was not the only hot-rod antic based on the interchange of eras.

There was a man up at Webster who bought an automobile because it was becoming the thing to do, and he set it in the barn on blocks, and did all his driving there. He'd crank it up, get in behind the wheel, let it into cruising gear, and sit there with the rear tires spinning in the air and practice driving. His wife would come out and sit up with him, and they'd take a long drive together, going nowhere but steering and shifting gears as occasion required, and admiring the scenery. The old fellow, whose life had been spent with horses, never did get up courage enough to take the contraption on the road.

Naturally, the young fly of today who can't remember when anything was new, will think that was just a story and won't believe there was once a time when a thing like that not only happened but that it was really quite a natural thing, and understandable.

One of the first automobiles ever owned in these parts was driven into Maine by a New Yorker who came up here to rusticate one summer, and he bought the car specially for the trip. He was wealthy and could do it. Then, after driving up, he decided he didn't like the idea, and realized he had momentarily given in to an impulse. He gave the car to Henry Bubier, who was his guide and companion on fishing trips. Henry didn't know anything about cars, either, and gingerly tried it on backroads until he got the feel of it.

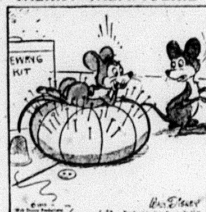

A youngster of fifteen, gunning his plaything down my hill at 100 m.p.h., won't appreciate how delicately the matter of driving a car was approached by somebody like Henry. But Henry worked on it, and at last felt he had mastered the trick, and drove over to Hebron to show his new automobile to his brother.

The brother kept sheep, and employed three or four of his flock to mow the lawn about the buildings. This meant he had a tight fence about the place, and at the driveway had a set of bars made of smooth spruce poles spaced closely so the sheep couldn't breach it. Henry drove up to the bars and came to a graceful stop. He set the handbrake, put the thing in neutral, and descended to remove the bars. Each bar was taken out and carried to one side in turn, and then Henry got into his auto, released the handbrake, put into gear, and drove through.

Next he stopped again, set the handbrake, put it in neutral and descended once more to put the bars back. Each bar was carefully inserted as before. Now Henry got into his car again and, intending to drive majestically up and stop by the kitchen door, he somehow got the machine in reverse and backed through the bars. What has hot rodding ever done to equal this?—By John Gould in The Christian Science Monitor.

HOPE FROM HUMBLE PLANT—A new compound has been thrown into the battle against heart disease. Oil is pressed from the seeds found in the center of a lowly, thistle-like plant called the safflower (inset). Called Saff, it is used in atherosclerosis, the heart disease that causes one death in seven in the United States. Matthew J. Lynch, a pharmacist at Abbott Laboratories in North Chicago, Ill., demonstrates how white emulsion of the seed oil is compounded with water.

THE FARM FRONT

by John Russell

The causes of the disorder known as apple scald which occurs on many apple varieties, waxing and waning in intensity from one growing season to the next, have baffled the efforts of research workers for over fifty years. Scald may be roughly described as the vague brown discolorations which occur on the surface of apples. On some varieties, like McIntosh, it is primarily associated with the stem cavity, and in others, it is associated with the lenticels as with Linda or Sandow. Its occurrence tends to lend credence to the old axiom "beauty is only skin deep" and defeats much of the present principles of marketing wherein much emphasis is placed on the beautification of the product.

Normally scald tends to be confined to the green or unblushed surfaces of apples and may be particularly severe on non-blushing varieties, such as Greening. It may form reticulate patterns and it may even penetrate the fruit flesh to shallow depths. Sometimes these shallow penetrations dry up and collapse and in other cases remain soft and gelatinous; the latter aspect is referred to as soft scald.

Scald generally appears after long storage, although it may occur as early as six weeks. Its presence is emphasized by removal to higher temperature at the end of storage and in some varieties low temperature itself may be a serious factor as with the variety Jonathan. In other varieties high storage temperatures leading to a rapid decline of fruit quality may produce scald. In Cortland, scald is associated with early picking; many varieties have increased susceptibility under high nitrogen fertilized programs, among which Wagener would be an example.

Generally scald has not been the formidable factor in Canada that it is in warmer climates. More recently, however, with the growth of controlled atmosphere (C.A.) storage, the risk of scald becomes more important. The object of C.A. storage is to enable a higher quality product to be put on the market at a late date. This depends on the storage of only high quality apples. An outbreak of scald could be very costly and the risk increases with length of storage. Scald on McIntosh in C.A. storage has been minimized by reducing the oxygen to a level of three per cent. Cortland, on the other hand cannot be placed in C.A. storage because the tendency to scald is too great.

The metabolic causes of scald are supposed to be found in the theory that toxic by-products from the respiration of the apple itself are trapped within the skin. Mineral oil wraps and emulsions control this disorder but are not considered practical. Most recently the Horticulture Division, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, has employed diphenyl amine dips on Cortland and has found this to be an excellent controller. Unfortunately this material is not acceptable for use on foods. But it is hoped that work with this material will supply clues to the use of other materials of a more innocuous type.

Crescent-shaped notches along the margins of sweet clover leaves is evidence of attack by the Sweet Clover Weevil. Seedling and mature clover alike are damaged by this small, dark-gray beetle and it is quite possible that the young or larvae which feed on the rootlets of the second year's growth are partially responsible for the spread of root rot disease. Dr. W. R. Allen of the Science Service, Canada Department of Agriculture has found the use of chemicals such as dieldrin, toxaphene, heptachlor and DDT, effective in the control of this insect. He also feels that good crop management will assist in keeping this pest down to a minimum.

Memory Selection: A woman that feareth the Lord, she shall be praised. Proverbs 31:30.

During this quarter we are studying personalities of the Old Testament. The first one is Miriam, sister of Moses and Aaron. She was quick-witted as a child. She stood in the distance to see what would happen her baby brother who had been lur and DDT, effective in the control of this insect. He also feels that good crop management will assist in keeping this pest down to a minimum.

In fields where destruction is common each year weevil populations can be reduced considerably by discontinuing sowing this forage crop for two successive years. As soon as a second year's crop of sweet clover in a weevil infested area has been harvested, stubble should be plowed or surface cultivated to destroy the beetles developing the soil. New sites for sweet clover should be as far from infested fields as possible bearing in mind the location of fields on neighbouring farms.

Very often seedling crops of sweet clover will be attacked by migrating weevils from fields that have been cut for hay. These migrations can be prevented by the application of insecticides along the edges of the fields in strips several rods wide. If leaf notching appears on newly sown clover, insecticides should be applied to the plants and the ground. A second year's growth can withstand fairly severe damage from this insect pest but seedling plants die quickly when attacked.

This defoliator spends the winter as an adult in trash, litter or top soil. Adults become active when the second year sweet clover begins to turn green in the spring and infest seedling plants when they appear above the ground.

placed in the bulrush ark among the flags by the river's brink. Perhaps her mother asked her to watch. Perhaps as a loving sister she acted on her own impulse. Then without fear and without identifying the child she brought her mother to the scene who secured temporary custody of her own child.

Miriam had leadership qualities as well as her brothers. God says through Micah (6:4): "I sent before thee Moses, Aaron and Miriam." After the miraculous crossing of the Red Sea she took her timbrel and led the women in a great outburst of rejoicing. She was a prophetess.

Then comes a blot on Miriam's career. Moses had married an Ethiopian woman. Miriam, joined by Aaron, started a whispering campaign. While resentment or jealousy toward the dark complexioned woman sparked the flame, the underlying cause seems to have been jealousy of Moses. They said, "Hath the Lord indeed spoken only by Moses? Hath he not spoken by us?"

Then God stepped in. In a pillar of cloud at the tabernacle He spoke to Miriam and Aaron in the presence of Moses and reproved them for speaking against His servant. When the cloud departed Miriam was leprous. Aaron was repentant and pled with Moses to pray for her. In great magnanimity characteristic of real greatness he prayed, "Heal her now, O God, I beseech thee." God answered his prayer but for seven days she had to remain outside the camp as one unclean. It was a severe lesson.

Much more credence is being given today to the view that many functional illnesses result from wrong attitudes as anger and jealousy and worry. It is also apparent that deliverance from these attitudes often aids in restoration to health. This is a roundabout way of saying that sin is sometimes an important factor in some illnesses. Deliverance from sin through repentance and faith in Jesus Christ may pave the way to a recovery from such illnesses.

Two cows were overtaken and passed by a jet plane, spurring flames from its exhaust. "Say, that fellow is in an awful hurry, isn't he?" said one crow. "Sure," cawed the other, "and so would you be if your tail was on fire."

TWO FIRES REPORTED DURING WEEK

Two forest fires occurred during the week of July 13th—one in South Canoto Township and one in Lavan Township. Fortunately, the fire fighters were able to get the fires under control quickly and the burned areas were 1/2 acre and 1 1/4 acres respectively. Carelessness with burning smoking material apparently was the cause of both these fires.

Campers and fishermen travelling in the woods are requested to exercise every precaution to see that smoking materials and campfires are completely extinguished. Use thermos bottles to carry hot drinks whenever possible and help reduce the use of fire and consequently the Forest Fire Danger.

STRIPPING AND SLIPPING

Ladies' hosiery firms are worried about sagging sales, reports The Financial Post, which points out: Once the average grown-up female bought over 16 pairs a year. Now she is down to a little better than a dozen.

Longer wearing stockings have something to do with declining demand, but bare legs are a major factor. It is against this practice that hosiery people are preparing to battle.

"At one time," says a Du Pont consumer researcher, "if a woman did not wear hosiery, she was apt to be judged unrefined, in poor taste, or even a little immoral."

He and his fellow researchers aim to reverse that social code.

The two-year-old in his play-pen is fascinated by life around him. He longs to pull the tail feathers out of every chicken on his father's farm. He has no idea at all how a farmer's son should behave, but he'll find out, later, when his brothers initiate him into the local 4-H club.

Here he'll learn by doing, pledged to use his head, heart, hands and health in the best possible way.

4-H Clubs were started with one simple idea in mind: to have rural young people do a worthwhile piece of work at home, voluntarily, and do it better than ever before. Plant a garden plot, perhaps, or raise a calf, make a dress, beautify a room.

The idea was so good that the young people swept their parents along with them, and farm life improved amazingly.

4-H Clubs have done many useful things. They have kept the right boys and girls on the farm, trained young men and women for leadership, improved life in rural communities by introducing better agricultural and home practices, and implanted the ideal of good citizenship in young minds.

There are about 75,000 4-H members in Canada. Many will graduate into farm organizations in which are the progressive young farmers who—by using modern machinery and farm techniques—help to keep all Canadians well fed.

CANADA MODEL FOR U.S. FAMILY ALLOWANCES

Three resolutions aimed at setting up an American system of family allowances similar to the one in Canada, have been introduced in the U.S. Congress.

They call for the appointment of a special congressional committee to study the Canadian system and possibly recommend similar legislation for the U.S.

All praise highly the Canadian programme and cite it as a model for the U.S. to follow.

The first resolution was proposed in the senate by Richard Neuberger (Dem. Ore.) who introduced a similar motion last year but found little support.

This year he was joined by five senate co-sponsors, including Sen. John Kennedy, Massachusetts Democrat, regarded as a presidential candidate in the 1960 election.

Two similar resolutions were introduced in the House of Representatives by Congressmen Thomas Porter, also an Oregon Democrat, and delegate John Burns, of Hawaii.

Neuberger said the Canadian program was an "enlightened" experiment which has brought great benefit to Canadian children. He said the Canadian program costs about $670,000,000 annually and estimated that similar scheme in the U.S. would cost more than $3,000,000,000.

LONG-RANGE PLANTING PLAN TO BE MADE

No trees are being planted in the District at the present time but the Reforestation staff is being kept busy on Extension and Inventory work.

Two boys' camps have been visited and instruction was given to the boys on tree identification, Fire Protection, Fish and Wild Life, Timber Management and Reforestation.

Several farms have been visited in connection with Reforestation on Planned Farms and it was found that although most of the farmers were or had been interested in establishing woods, they do not seem to have the time to do anything about it.

An Inventory is being made of all plantable Crown land in the District. This project was initiated by Zone Forester W. E. Edwards. A photo survey of all land involved was made by him and some ground checks were also completed. The aim of the project this summer is to complete the ground checking, compile the data collected and from this information make up a long-range planting plan for the District.

COOPER AND REMINGTON W. M. S.

The regular meeting of Cooper and Remington Women's Missionary Society was held at the home of Mrs. F. Reynolds.

The worship service was conducted by the President, Mrs. Maurice Reynolds, and was under "Senior Citizens", the theme "He, Shepherds Me." The call-to-worship by the President, taken from Psalm 62: 5, was followed by prayer. Hymn 281, "In Heavenly Love Abiding", was sung, followed by the Scripture, Psalm 23, in unison. Meditation and prayer followed. "Unto the Hills Around" was sung, followed by prayer.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and roll call answered by a quotation from New Testament, showing an attendance of twenty-three.

The Friendship Roll Call was taken by Mrs. Parks. Mrs. A. McCoy gave the treasurer's report. The offering was taken and dedicated by Mrs. Lewis.

Mrs. R. Rollins, group leader, opened her program with hymn, "My Own Dear Land." Mrs. Rollins introduced the Sectional President, Mrs. Keith Bray, of Ivanhoe, who gave a very fine message.

Mrs. W. Rollins sang the solo, "It Is No Secret."

A Bible contest was given by Janet Reynolds. Hymn, "Lord of all Lands", was sung. Mrs. Lewis closed the meeting with prayer.

Lunch was served by the hostess and her assistants.

SCRUB THE HOUSE

Soap and water often can freshen the paint on the outside of a house. Use an ordinary scrubbing brush. If the brush has a long handle it won't be necessary to move the ladder often. After an entire wall has been washed, it can be rinsed with a garden hose.

BEING A GROWN-UP DRIVER ISN'T EASY

(From The Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada)

Being a grown-up driver is a difficult art. It takes character and alertness, decency and good judgment.

For there is one fool on every road, a deadly menace to you and your children. And there are good people good drivers, who are foolish for one impulsive moment. For the possible gain of a few seconds, they will bet their lives on a highway version of Russian roulette.

There are wonderful compensations for being a grown-up driver. You never get ulcers. Your fenders still have the fresh curve that came from the factory. Your insurance man is your friend. And motor-ing is still a great pleasure.

SARAN WRAP IN REDESIGNED PACKAGE

Saran Wrap, the versatile household plastic wrap, will soon be available in a more convenient package at retail outlets across Canada, announces L. Kenneth Lichty, general sales manager, Dow Chemical of Canada, Limited.

The redesigned package is the result of extensive marketing surveys which showed that Canadian housewives like the convenience of Saran Wrap, but objected to the difficulty of trying to locate the end of the roll each time it was used. The new package eliminates these "lost ends" by relocating the cutter bar on the bottom edge of the box. This permits two inches of transparent film to extend from the box at all times, facilitating easier handling of the wrap.

Saran Wrap in its handy new container is scheduled to be in most stores by mid-July.

HUSBAND GOES HIS WAY. WIFE WANTS TO LEAVE

"For 15 years I've lived with a husband who is actually married to his business and his sports, and don't you dare smile for it is NOT funny. Sundays and holidays he is off with his gun or his rod, while I stay home to get hot meal ready when he comes in. . . . There just can't be another man as thoughtless! Never has he taken me out anywhere unless I've begged him, which spoils it all; usually he says he's too tired or must go back to work that night. He has never bought me a gift, nor even a box of candy or a flower; yet I know that in his own way he loves me dearly.

"I grew so depressed that a year ago we adopted a little girl of six, and my husband is crazy about her. But now I am confined more than ever, and haven't had a single evening out for any fun. I'm really afraid I'm going to crack up if something doesn't happen to break this monotony. (I have practically forgotten how to laugh.)

"Everybody likes my husband and calls him a good man, and he is; he provides well for us, he doesn't drink and I'm surely grateful for that. But for nine years I worked hard so he could buy his own business, and now we have a lovely home and a good income. That isn't enough, Anne Hirst. I want to LIVE!

"I have even considered leaving with the baby and starting all over again. I am in my 30's, and I don't want to stay buried the rest of my life."

"After years of reading letters from discontented wives, I long ago concluded that more women suffer from neglect than from actual cruelty, and too many break under the monotony of their lonely routine. To drag through years of repetitious days with nothing to look forward to strangles the spirit and saps one's energies. Housewives need relaxation with their husbands, good times with their friends, and wholesome activities in the world outside.

"TO 'GERTRUDE': No matter how low your spirits have sunk, don't think of leaving. No matter what arrangements you might make, you would be depriving your little girl of advantages she will need increasingly as she grows up. She needs both parents, too, and your husband will find her even more interesting as she develops. You both want to provide her with the normal home life she deserves, and enjoys together the exciting years that are to come.

Tell your husband how near the breaking point you are, how much you need recreation regularly, doing the things you both enjoyed before you were married. A more active social life will benefit his business, too, and be useful to the child's development later. Now you can well afford a baby-sitter, so plan that. And remind your husband that while financial success is important, no man can be proud of a wife who is growing old before her time. It is a distinct reflection on him.

Your husband has been thoughtless in forming the habit of spending all his leisure away from home, and when you explain why you, too, must have fun I think he will understand.

In the remote possibility that you fail in your plea, why not send out an SOS signal to your women friends and spend the day with them, getting home in time to prepare his supper?

RESENTS ADVANCES

"Dear Anne Hirst: I graduated from college last year, and for quite a while I've been having trouble with the boys I date. Every last one of them tries to make love to me! We always end up on a lonely road or in the park and the arguments begin.

"Other girls I've talked to don't have this experience, and I am really worried. I certainly do not lead boys on, and I don't think I am too emotional. Have you the solution? GRETA"

A girl can subconsciously invite advances through her conversation or her manner. She doesn't protest when the boy's arm is around her waist, nor get affronted by his first kiss. But perhaps her response is warmer than she means it to be.

Lots of boys write me that they try a girl out on the first date because SHE seems to expect it. If you are not guilty of these reactions, console yourself with the truth: some girls naturally pulsate with physical attraction, while others leave the lad's temperature as it was. We are as we are.

Be even more restrained than you have been, and at the first danger signal say that you do NOT go in for that sort of thing. Avoid surroundings which encourage petting, keep the conversation on the light side and your good-nights gay and brief. Any smart girl can have a good time without being called a blue-stocking, you know.

If your husband neglects you, don't let it continue. He isn't really selfish, he just doesn't realize how much you need people and recreation to relieve the monotony. Talk it over, and let him plan a brighter life for you with him. Anne Hirst's sympathy is comforting — and practical. Write her at Box 1, 123 Eighteenth St., New Toronto, Ont.

Historic Names For Hotel Rooms

The romantic history of the beginnings of Canada in New France three centuries ago has given the Canadian National Railway glamorous names for the banquet halls and other public rooms in its new Queen Elizabeth Hotel, now under construction and due to open for its first convention next year.

Four banquet rooms have been named after early Canadian explorers: Louis Joliet, Jacques Lesperance Marquette, Daniel Du Luth and Sir Alexander MacKenzie.

The hotel's grill room will be known as the "Beaver Club", recalling an exclusive rendez-vous of fur traders originally located at the top of Beaver Hall Hill.

The original club, founded in 1775, was composed of partners in the North West Company who had spent at least one winter in the north west. It was disbanded in 1824 when the North West Company amalgamated with the Hudson's Bay Company.

Other names to be used in the new hotel are: "Les Voyageurs", the main cocktail lounge; "Le Panorama", overlooking the city from the 21st floor; "Le Rendez-vous"; "Le Bistro"; and "Salle Bonaventure".

The hotel's 11 private dining rooms and salons have been named after Quebec rivers: St. Lawrence, Saguenay, St. Maurice, Richelieu, Chaudiere, Gatineau, Bersimis, Matapedia, St. Charles, Harricana and Peribonca.

CHRONICLES OF GINGER FARM

by Gwendoline P. Clarke

Our friends are beginning to find out where we live. Last Sunday we had three lots of visitors, one after another, and of course we were glad to see them all, especially as I had enough cake and cookies to go around. Not that I would have worried too much if I hadn't, we can always get by on tea and toast.

Later in the week I took on a job of baby-sitting for daughter. She is convener of the Girl Guides in her district who are taking part in the huge pageant to be presented at the Maple Leaf Gardens. I went in on the day of the rehearsal. I imagine it was quite an affair with nearly 3,000 Guides and Brownies taking part. Daughter's telephone was ringing continually from the time I got to the house to the time when she left for the rehearsal. Good thing it isn't a party line!

After she had gone I took the boys to High Park Playground—David on foot and Eddie in his push-cart. The entrance to the Park is only a ten-minute walk. The playground was full of pre-school-age youngsters with mother or father in charge. And what a time they were having. Swings, slides, sand-pile and a hand-propelled merry-go-round. The playground must be a wonderful energy-outlet for the many children who may not have so much as a backyard to play in at home. One mother said the days her children came to the park they slept so much better at night. As I watched the youngsters at play I couldn't help thinking how lucky country children are who have a big farm garden to run around in and probably dogs, cats and kittens to play with. To my way of thinking the farm is still the best place to bring up a family. The parents may not be over-supplied with money or the home too convenient but at least father, mother and children lead a normal family life — they eat, work and play together. And that is more than can be said for families where father is away to the office, plant or factory before the children are up in the morning. When he returns at night he is tired and sometimes irritable, and so are the children. It doesn't make for a happy family relationship. Such conditions apply not only to urban homes but also to those in the country from whence father commutes back and forth to Malton, Hamilton or Toronto — or wherever his job happens to be. Conditions are even worse when father is on night shift. Seems to me family living in so many cases requires a lot of adjustment these days.

And when you pull up stakes and settle down in a new district that takes some adjustment too — especially when there is an election in the 'offing! Last week we went down to our old riding to make sure our names were on the voter's list. They weren't! Partner just about saw red for awhile. You see we haven't been in our new home long enough to be eligible for a vote here and because we were not at the farm the day the enumerators called — if they did call — our names were left off the list. Now after 35 years residence in one place we shall have to be sworn in before we can vote. And we are not the only ones either. We hear a lot about padded voter's lists, what about the ones where eligible voters are not listed. Surely one way is as bad as another.

Another of our adjustment worries has been mail delivery. On our old mail route there were two other Clarke's and of course we often got each other's mail. Now, in our new location we find ourselves bracketed with yet another Clarke. Not only that but we get mail forwarded to us that belongs to the old route. Very confusing, isn't it? Before we moved we did our best to notify all those from whom we were likely to receive business or personal mail, but there is always the odd, unexpected letter. As for advertising literature . . . That's where we give up!

The same applies to the telephone. I put our phone number on most of my correspondence now but it doesn't do much good. The very day I went baby-sitting friends from a distance came to call — meant to phone but they had lost the number. I didn't get home until next day so I missed them entirely. But we get plenty of phone calls other than our own. In fact it is hard to know "for whom the bell rings."

To close here is a little nature story. Partner was cutting brush along the line fence. There he found a flat stone with a carved inscription. The inscription read "Hear lies a Warbler." How long had the little tombstone been there I wonder? Who owned the warbler — was it captive or wounded? We shall never learn the answer but I got Partner to leave the stone anyway. That much we can do for the little song-bird — silent now — and whose story we shall never know

Fine selections of totem poles which have been placed in Thunderbird Park at Victoria and in Stanley Park at Vancouver are viewed by thousands of visitors to British Columbia each year.

Farmers Retire In The States

The Social Security Administration reports itself deluged with self-employed farmers who seek to "retire" on security benefits.

The rate of retirement is a whopping four-times the estimate in 1954 when the law was broadened to include farmers. The first claims could not be made until 1956, since farmers had to show net earnings of at least $400 in 1955.

This year 400,000 claims have been filed by farmers ready to retire or widows who recently qualified, asking survivors' benefits for themselves and children under 18 years of age.

In 1954 there were 786,000 farmers, 65 or older, with others coming into the 65-age group at the rate of about 100,000 per year.

One of the more practical reasons for the boom in retirement claims is the figures showing that for many farmers today their occupation is a starvation one. Twenty-six per cent of the farmers making less than $1,000 per year were in the 65-age group. Only 11 per cent of those making $3,000 or more had reached 65.

Then, too, the act covers the "city farmers," a phrase which describes those who own farms and operate them with tenants or hired help to whom they give supervision. Many of these had employment benefits piled up and could retire, turning over their farms to their children or selling them. This policy—turning the land over to sons or putting them on the market—is a common one. But, of course, not too many sons are interested in a farm.

The truth is the small farm with its mule and hand labor is too small to make mechanization profitable. There are an estimated one million too many farms in the nation. Of these about two-thirds are in the Southeast. This region has always had most of the farms, because they had more small units. Children on such farms want to leave them for good and valid reasons. The soil bank already is depleting populations in the purely row-crop regions. Farmers are putting their worst land in "the bank," tenants, who never lived too well anyhow, are of necessity moving off to the nearest job opportunities.

Change goes on. And nowhere does it move with greater speed than in agriculture. With 400,000 farmers applying for retirement this year, which is not yet half gone, it would appear the number of farms soon will be sharply reduced. —Atlanta Constitution.

Legendary Car

That long-sought-after used car "owned by two nice old ladies who only drove it round the neighborhood" has become a legend and the car-lot dealer's chant a joke. But now and then the legend does come to life, so to speak, and occasionally even improves on the fairy tale.

Back in 1921 Ben Koester of Jefferson City, Missouri, bought a new Model T Ford touring car. For some reason he forswore driving five years later, and for the last 31 years the car has reposed in his basement garage. A few days ago an old-car fancier heard about this relic and bought it. All he had to do was fill the gas tank, change the oil, put in a new battery, and pump up a tire before he merrily drove it away.

We're glad to be told it was an old-car fancier. For tender as our memories may be of the durable Model T, which did fulfill the maker's claim, "Takes you there, gets you back," the getting there and the coming back were pretty rigorous processes, judged by today's standards. And the owner of even a new Model T could hardly expect to travel over 100 miles on a quart of oil or much farther on a gallon of gasoline than many a modern superpowered giant, or more than 10,000 miles on his tires.

Incidentally, however, the price Mr. Koester paid in 1921 seems even more legendary than the car: $585. —The Christian Science Monitor.

Skiing and golfing are year-round sports in British Columbia in its equable climate, and moose and mountain goats, salmon and speckled trout make it a sportsman's paradise.

HATCH 30,000 PHEASANTS AT CODRINGTON

When the pheasant hunting season opens in the fall, large numbers of Ontario sportsmen will be taking home birds that have been raised in Codrington, five miles north of Brighton, on No. 30 Highway.

During the past few weeks, the Ontario Government's Game Bird Hatchery moved into its top production stage and is well on its way toward meeting the annual target of 35,000 to 40,000 birds.

To date, there have been about 30,000 pheasants hatched by Ted Mound, English-born manager of the establishment. The hatching begins in March and continues into July when the quota is usually reached.

Mr. Mound is in charge of one of the two bird hatcheries operated by the Department of Lands and Forests. The other one is located at Simcoe, Ont. Adjacent to the Codrington hatchery is a fish hatchery, but the two operations are completely separate.

Mr. Mound has been at the hatchery for 19 years, and has thousands of birds of all ages under his care at all times of the year. The bird population drops to 1,200 pheasants during the winter months when there are no hatching operations being carried on.

Spread over a number of acres, the hatchery is composed of numerous buildings and fenced yards.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to thank Doctors Cronk, Loynes and Beatty, and Bush's Ambulance Service, also friends and neighbours for their kindness, cards and floral tributes during the illness and passing of my beloved husband, and a special thanks to Mr. Angus MacKenzie for his sympathetic kindness. Mrs. Joe Hayton.
